Officers Urge Force Balance, Tactical Air as Chief Reliance

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy declared yesterday that the Nation's present war policy—emphasizing strategic air warfare and the A-bomb—is "wrong."

Top officers urged that we rely more on "balanced forces" and "tactical" aviation — light, high-speed jet bombers and fighters—to aid western European armies and close with the enemy's military forces—than on sending B-36s to hit industrial centers with the bomb.

Two of the Navy ranking experts on atomic warfare joined in presentation of this view.

Admiral William H. P. Blandy, commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet and head of the Bikini atomic bomb tests, declared that the "probable results" of strategic A-bombing "do not appear to me sufficiently promising to justify eliminating any essential forces from any of the armed services."

Blandy also charged that "harm is being done" to the Navy by "unwarranted" cuts ordered by Pentagon chiefs, and that more are pending.

They will have a "very dangerous effect" on the fighting capabilities of the Atlantic Fleet and hence jeopardize the security of the United States, the admiral said.

Under questioning, Blandy said he felt the decision canceling the construction of the 65,000-ton aircraft carrier United States should be reconsidered. And he agreed that at present, the Navy was not getting "adequate recognition" in high councils at the Pentagon.

He urged that the unification law be amended to prevent two members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from interfering with the development of new weapons of the third.

Sees Knowledge Lacking

Ultimately all should participate in such decisions, but today the Joint Chiefs are not well enough versed to pass on another service's professional problems, said the Atlantic commander. In gaining such power, however, each service must keep within its appropriations and maintain supporting forces for the others, he added.

"The present procedures of the Joint Chiefs of Staff are faulty in that respect, and in my opinion there lies the principal source of our present difficulties," Blandy told the committee in an extraordinary night session.

One of the Navy's chief complaints has been a 2-to-1 decision to cancel construction of the super aircraft carrier, the United States.

Rear Admiral Ralph A. Ofstie, Navy member of the military liaison committee to the Atomic Energy Commission, charged that approved strategic bombing plans are "militarily unsound" and "morally wrong."

Sees Lessons Ignored

He told the House Armed Services Committee that Air Force plans to send B-36 "intercontinental" bombers, without fighter escorts, against enemy centers—without having first won control of the air—ignore the "bitter lessons" of World War II.

The bombers won't get through, and if they do, enemy industrial centers are the wrong primary targets, Ofstie said. Further, the inaccuracy of bombing from 40,000 feet means the "random mass slaughter of men, women and children in the enemy country."

"We must insure," continued Ofstie, "that our military techniques do not strip us of self-respect. Our country has had a long history in support of measures for the amelioration of the effects of warfare.

"If we now consciously adopt a ruthless and barbaric policy toward other peoples, how can we prevent the breakdown of those standards of morality which have

Sesqui Fund Is Approved By Congress After Fight

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Congress voted finally yesterday, after a bitter, last-ditch House battle, to spend three million dollars for the National Capital Sesquicentennial Celebration here next year.

In the same bill went money for paying off back salary increases to some 18,000 District employes for the last fiscal year. District officials have announced the pay checks will go out when the bill is signed.

Officials of the Sesquicentennial Commission set up by Congress to stage the celebration hailed the final decision with an announcement that ground will be broken February 1 for the Sesquicentennial Buildings, planned for a 114-acre site bordering Kingman Lake in Anacostia Park.

The celebration is slated to start April 15, with the "Freedom Fair" to follow later. The target date for its opening is July 4.

Saved From Certain Defeat

In the House, the fund was rescued by Administration forces from certain defeat in a whip-cracking maneuver that switched seven key votes to support of the fund.

Before the switches, the vote had stood at 163 to 160 against having the Sesquicentennial. While Democrats mustered their seven, Republicans claimed but three to switch against the fund, and the final roll call showed a 164-159 tally for staging the Sesquicentennial.

Voice vote approval of the supplemental appropriation bill containing the Sesquicentennial money followed quickly, first in the House, then in the Senate. The measure now goes to President Truman who had personally intervened to resolve the months-long dispute in favor of the celebration.

Back Pay Speeded

Final clearance of the funds bill also assured early payment of retroactive salary increases for District government employes for the period from July, 1948, through June, 1949. The pay money totals $4,205,850.

Also included is $100,000 for running the District child day care centers this year, $225,000 for Bell Vocational School improvements, $103,065 for District payments to local hospitals for treating charity patients in the year ending June, 1948, and other District items.

As the House took up the money bill, Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.) launched a hard-hitting drive to persuade the House to refuse money at all for the Sesquicentennial for the fourth time. He charged Sesquicentennial officials were asking for the money, not as a matter of necessity, but for the prestige a congressional appropriation would give to the Sesquicentennial.

A still sharper anti-Sesqui blast came from the Democratic side when Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.) declared that "it's about time Washington is weaned."

He said he pays $175 a month

Rails, Autos Lead Stock Buying Into New High Ground

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—The stock market spurted into new high ground for 1949 today on a buying wave centered in shares of railroads and automobile companies.

The gains were from a few cents to around $3 a share with some of the market leaders reaching as high as $4.

One of the factors making for the rise was a Wall Street expectation of an early settlement of the coal and steel strikes.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 60 cents to $67.40, the highest point since November 4, 1948.

Skelly Oil was up $4.12 at $115.12, Nickel Plate up $3 at $83.25, Philip Morris up $1 at $50.75, General Motors up 87 cents at $65.75, and International Paper up $1.25 at $64.25.

Heat Wave May Touch Record High

The current heat wave may soar past 85 today to set an all-time record for the date, the weatherman reported yesterday.

Tops for October 12 at this point is 85 recorded in 1928.

Yesterday's high of 85 although 5 degrees below the all-time record for October 11 set in 1919 was still 16 degrees above the normal maximum of 69, the weatherman reported.

Cooler weather is expected to afford relief Thursday and Friday but the weekend will be warmer, it was predicted. Scattered showers are expected Thursday and probably again Sunday.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett gave his bluecoats a break yesterday. The men were allowed to doff tunics and operate in shirtsleeves from 8 a. m. until midnight.

This was progress over the previous day when the officers were given the privilege of unbuttoning their jackets.

Not so fortunate were sailors. They had been ordered into woolen blues as of last Monday and must continue to sweat it out, a Navy spokesman said.

Off-post dress for Army personnel is optional until November 1 when woolens must be worn. The same situation holds true for the Air Force.

Main reason for the hot spell, the weatherman said, is a circulatory movement of air from the southwest, which has been acting as a buffer, keeping out cool air from Canada.

Senate Fails To Take Farm Support Vote

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate failed to reach a vote on the long-argued Anderson farm bill yesterday, although it had hoped to dispose of the proposal in a few hours.

It will meet today at 11 o'clock in the hopes of reaching a decision by nightfall, and thus move along toward ultimate adjournment.

Yesterday's deliberations opened with reports of a spirited disagreement at a White House conference of Democratic farm leaders with President Truman. It ended with reports that the debate may still be a long way from its end. Rumors that two Senators, one a Republican, were considering offering the Brannan plan as a substitute for the much-amended Anderson Plan, swept the Capitol at 7:30 p. m. as the Senate recessed.

If that should develop it may add hours of debate to the five days that have already marked the bill's progress.

Anderson Vs. Brannan

Another report was that Anderson was ready to blast the Administration's farm plan if anyone dared introduce the Brannan proposal. Against that was a report from the Agriculture Department that Brannan was prepared to answer any such blast with a statement tearing Anderson's proposed farm bill to pieces.

Several versions of the White House conference were given Senate members. All attending who would talk agreed that President Truman held out for high-level price guarantees. They similarly agreed that he asked the members of his party to get together on a bill he could sign. The White House refused to state what kind of a bill that would be.

Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee said the President "left the impression" he wanted price supports pegged permanently at 90 percent of parity.

In doing so, Mr. Truman went directly against Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas, and his former Secretary of Agriculture, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) It is Anderson's bill, setting up a sliding scale of supports—from 75

Saturday Adjourning Hope Dims

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A tenth-inning committee snarl over displaced-persons legislation and a Senate slowdown on other measures yesterday dimmed the prospects of a Saturday adjournment.

Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) refused flatly to say Congress will adjourn Saturday.

"I doubt we can make it unless we make faster progress on DP and farm legislation," he told newsmen following a program huddle with his Senate Policy Committee.

Displaced persons legislation, the Administration's last scheduled "must," had just missed a vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee for the second straight day.

Committee Meets Today

Acting Judiciary Chairman Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) tried to arrange a special afternoon meeting to report out the bill. His request for the committee to meet while the Senate was in session was blocked on the floor by Senator Harry P. Cain (D., Wash.).

Following a series of intra-party huddles, Kilgore announced the committee will meet at 10 a. m. today and vote on the DP bill at 11:30 a. m. One committee source said, however, that there can be no assurance the group will vote at that time, since the committee has no "cloture" rule.

Lucas said he hoped to call up the long-stalemated bill in the Senate on Thursday. Since committee reports must lie over a day before Senate consideration, Lucas' timetable can't be met unless the committee acts today.

One Other Recourse

Leaders have one other recourse, which they hesitate to use so long as there is a reasonable chance the committee will act.

Pending before the Senate is a petition signed by 16 Senators of both parties to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill.

Lucas has announced he will call up the discharge petition as a last resort. Leadership hesitation to use this method was attributed to the fact that many Senators committed to the legislation traditionally refuse to discharge a committee.

Still pending before the Judiciary Committee was a motion by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) to discharge the subcommittee handling the DP measure and report the bill to the floor.

Vote Scheduled Monday

It was scheduled to go to a vote Monday, but the subcommittee recessed as a mark of respect to Senator Bert H. Miller (D., Idaho), who died here Saturday.

A vote was then slated for Tuesday, but Richard Arens, staff director of the subcommittee, was called before the committee to report on handling of the bill and had not finished when the committee quit to go to the Senate chamber.

It was then that Kilgore requested permission for a special meeting at 1:45 p. m. and was blocked by Cain.

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) said he would have objected if Cain hadn't. He said the office of Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) has requested both Senators to object.

Eastland Called Away

Eastland, a leading opponent of the House-passed bill repealing 1948 restrictions on DP admissions, was called back to Mississippi because of a death in his family and has asked that any action be delayed until his return.

Senator Kilgore's associates said today's 11:30 a. m. deadline for a vote was set as an "act of consideration" for Eastland, to enable him to return in time for the vote. McClellan said, however, that he understood Eastland could not return before Thursday morning.

A complicating factor was a cabled request from Europe last week from Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chief Senate opponent of the bill. McCarran, who went to Europe to "investigate" DP operations, charged "fraud" in administration of the law, asked more time to

Reds Purging 30,000, Fear Grips Czechs

Prague, Oct. 11 (AP).—Communist police roundups threw a fear bordering on hysteria into large sections of Czechoslovakia's 13 million people tonight.

Some estimates heard by Western sources of the total seized or marked for arrest ranged to 30,000 and 40,000. These estimates could not be confirmed.

Although the tempo of arrests appeared to be receding from its peak of last week in Prague, many landlords, architects, confectioners and small shopkeepers still were being picked up, and their businesses confiscated. In some cases their apartments were seized, and their families dispossessed.

The main drive appeared to be against the propertied classes, but the widespread arrests, reaching through Bohemia and Moravia, were accompanied by purges of government employes, the clergy, army and even the Communist ranks.

Slovakia, as yet, appeared untouched by any extraordinary wave of arrests.

The charges—where any were made—ranged from high treason

Official Washington, Diplomats Honor Indian Leader, Here for Month's Visit

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India, the most influential leader of Asia, arrived yesterday afternoon on his first visit to the United States.

He found official Washington eager to make a good impression on him. President Truman and five members of the Cabinet went to the National Airport to meet him, an honor guard of soldiers, sailors and marines presented arms and a 19-gun salute boomed out in his honor.

The President gripped him by the hand, flashed a big and friendly smile at him, and welcomed him as "the loved and respected leader of a great nation of free people."

Then, likening him to a present-day Columbus, the President said: "Destiny willed it that our country should have been discovered in the search for a new route to yours. I hope that your visit, too, will be in a sense a discovery of America."

The President added the hope that Nehru's four weeks' visit here would leave him "with the firm conviction that we are indeed your warm friends."

All this reflected the official belief that Nehru's impressions of the United States would shape India's policy toward the West. Until now Nehru has seemed distrustful of the United States, and has stood firmly against taking sides in the political struggle with Soviet Russia.

There was no sign of distrust in Nehru's happy smile or in his words as he replied to President Truman's welcome. He said his trip to the United States was "the fulfillment of a long-felt desire," and he expressed the hope that the two countries could find "many ways" of working together.

Nehru chose Eastern dress for his Washington welcome, although he had worn Western clothes at the meeting of the British Commonwealth Prime Ministers in London last year. He wore a white "Gandhi cap," a tightly buttoned long coat of reddish brown, and white leggings that made him seem slender alongside President Truman's stocky figure.

Commonwealth envoys in Washington, including Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, were among the officials who greeted the former fighter for Indian freedom. The Indian Ambassador, Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, Nehru's sister, was there in a gray sari, and stood alongside President Truman while Nehru's plane taxied slowly up the runway to the Military Air Transport terminal.

Nehru had crossed from England in the presidential plane, the Independence.

Last night the green, orange and white flag of independent India flew from Blair House as a sign that Nehru was staying there.

Reds Demand Nations Reveal A-Bomb Tally

Lake Success, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Soviet Union tonight demanded a full count of atomic bombs and other arms in the war chests of the 59 members of the United Nations. It was the first such proposal from the Russians since President Truman on September 23 said there was evidence of an atomic blast in Russia.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jakob A. Malik made his brief proposal at the end of a long, quarreling session of the United Nations Security Council.

The two-line proposal said:

"The Security Council deems necessary the submission by member states of information on conventional armaments as well as information on atomic weapons."

Warren R. Austin, United States delegate and Council president this month, said in a statement after the Council adjourned that any census of weapons without verification is meaningless.

"This is another attempt to fool the public," Austin added.

After the meeting, Malik was asked whether it could be assumed Russia has atomic weapons. He said "Read the Tass communication." This referred to the announcement by the Soviet news agency on September 25 that the Russians now have atomic weapons at their disposal.

Earlier he had cast Russia's thirty-ninth veto to block approval of a resolution of the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments. This resolution laid down a set of principles to limit armaments.

Crime Probe in Washington Gets Quick House Approval

The House gave quick indorsement yesterday to plans for a sweeping investigation of Washington crime, and the effectiveness of law enforcement agencies here.

It approved a special resolution authorizing a District Committee survey of the crime conditions here, and a report to Congress next year.

With the House backing, District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) immediately called a meeting of his committee for 11 a. m. Thursday, to discuss the plan for the investigation.

Initial step then will be appointment of a subcommittee headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), sponsor of the crime probe.

Prospects for some controversy in Thursday's meeting were indicated by protests yesterday of committee members who said they had not been given a chance in advance to discuss the plan.

The resolution for the crime study had been cleared by the Rules Committee without reference to the House District Committee.

Davis said he had discussed the plan with several members. Chairman McMillan pointed out that the Rules Committee has sole jurisdiction over resolutions for investigations, and said there would be ample opportunity for discussion Thursday.

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), ranking minority member of the House District Committee, was first to ask why the proposed investigation had never been discussed by the District Committee.

Aside from the subpena powers given by the special resolution, Bates told the House the District committee has full authority to investigate all phases of the District

Airman Prisoner Parachutes To Brief Liberty From Plane

Nashville, Ark., Oct. 11 (AP).—A military prisoner bailed out of an Air Force plane on a dare over southwest Arkansas today. He was apprehended five hours later walking nonchalantly along a highway.

The soldier, identified as Pvt. Howard Shinneman, 23, of the Forbes Air Force Base at Topeka, Kans., suffered only a scratched finger. He said it was his first parachute jump.

Sheriff Arthur E. Hicks, who captured the soldier, said Shinneman told him he jumped from a C-82—"Flying Boxcar"—when the southbound ship was flying east of Nashville around 1 or 1:30 p. m.

The "Flying Boxcar" has two doors at the rear of the fuselage designed for use by parachutists in time of war.

He said he did it because "the guys bet me I wouldn't" He didn't identify "the guys."

[Shinneman said he jumped from 3000 feet, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

Shinneman's wife lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the Air Force said.

Churchill Rejects Minimum Wage Doctrine for British

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Winston Churchill rejected the idea of a minimum wage for British workers today in a sharp split with his wartime crony, Lord Beaverbrook.

Both Churchill, the Conservative Party leader, and Beaverbrook, Conservative British press lord, are ardent foes of the Labor government.

Their dispute came amid increased reports that the government soon may call an election for indorsement of its planning and financial policies. The Conservatives' annual three-day conference opens Wednesday.

However, the British Press Association's lobby correspondent said "chances of a November general election receded sharply tonight" and Britons may not vote until next spring.

British lobby correspondents often write with official guidance. No government spokesman could be reached, however, for comment on the story.

The Press Association's correspondent wrote that there is good

Cabinet Pay Hike Measure Agreed On

Senate-House conferees agreed yesterday on a bill raising Cabinet members from $15,000 to $22,500 a year and giving substantial pay boosts to some 200 other top Government executives.

President Truman asked for the increase on the ground that the Government must pay more to get and hold good men for top jobs.

The bill is a compromise between one passed by the Senate, estimated to cost 750 million dollars a year, and one passed by the House estimated to cost $1,250,000,000 a year. The lower Senate figure prevailed in most cases.

The compromise must be approved by both houses before it can be signed by the President and the raises become effective.

FBI Head Boosted

The executive pay bill gives FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover an increase from $14,000 to $16,000 a year. Others raised to the $16,000 class include members of the Civil Service Commission and chairmen of the Export-Import Bank Board, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Maritime Commission.

The Deputy Secretary of Defense, Stephen T. Early, gets a raise from $14,500 a year to $20,000. The sub-Cabinet Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force are raised from $14,000 to $18,000.

Most undersecretaries and other "second men" in Cabinet departments are raised from $10,330 a year to $17,500.

Others put into the $17,500 class include the Comptroller General, the Director of the Budget, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, Federal Security Administrator, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, Administrator of General Services, and Housing and Home Finance Administrator.

Others Raised

Assistant secretaries of most departments are raised to $15,000 from $10,330.

Others in the $15,000 class include members of the Civil Aeronautics Board, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Power Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, National Labor Relations Board, National Mediation Board, Railroad Retirement Board, Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Tariff Commission.

The heads of many smaller Government agencies and the top assistants in some others get raises to $14,000 a year.

Agreement was reached on raises for 12 special assistants to the President at rates to be fixed by the Chief Executive. The ceiling is to be $20,000 each for two posts, $18,000 each for three others and $15,000 each for the other seven.

to 90 percent of parity—that is being considered.

Two farm leaders said that Mr. Truman stared at Lucas and Anderson as he reminded them that they agreed a month ago to back high price supports. Both Lucas and Anderson refused to comment on the meeting.

The meeting was attended by Vice President Barkley, who last week voted against Anderson and Lucas in breaking a tie vote, Anderson, Lucas, Thomas, Agriculture Secretary Brannan, House Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), and House Agriculture Committee leaders, Harold D. Cooler (D., N. C.), and Stephen Pace (D., Ga.).

Both Cooley and Pace attended the day's debates on the Senate floor. It was reported they already were discussing the program for the conference committee that will get the bill as soon as the Senate votes. The House has passed the Gore bill calling for a continuation of full 90 percent supports for another year.

During the day one after another amendment was beaten down, but each served to delay final vote. Amendments called for support prices for all sorts of agriculture products, ranging from Angora rabbits, offered by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) to Long Island ducks asked by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.).

By a vote of 44 to 28, it adopted an amendment by Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.) providing that future agreements under the reciprocal trade law must not lower the barriers against importation of farm products if their entry would conflict with farm aid programs. Magnuson said it doesn't make sense to use Government money to support farm prices and at the same time cut tariffs so as to let in additional foreign crops to swell United States surpluses.

"Terrific" Effect

Lucas, who opposed the Magnuson amendment, said its effect would be "terrific." He said he would try to have it removed in conference.

Also beaten were amendments to repeal the Sugar Act of 1948 and put sugar under the farm bill, and to waive acreage allotments on new land opened for farming by the Bureau of Reclamation. Others were an amendment by Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) to make supports mandatory for beef, pork, poultry, turkeys, eggs and other Minnesota products, and one by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) asking supports for hemp.

Half a dozen amendments remain to be voted on today before action on the entire bill is taken.

Ernest Gross Nominated for Post at U. N.

Assistant Secretary Ernest A. Gross, who has been in charge of the State Department's congressional relations for most of this year, was nominated yesterday to be deputy United States representatives to the United Nations.

His successor as Assistant Secretary will be Jack K. McFall, a Foreign Service officer who was executive secretary of the House Appropriations Committee for 14 years before the war.

Born in Tacoma, Wash., in 1905, McFall studied at the Georgetown School of Foreign Service and became a member of the District of Columbia bar while serving the Appropriations Committee. He joined the committee staff in 1929, left it for naval service in 1942, and returned to the committee in 1946 before joining the Foreign Service.

Gross had planned to leave his State Department post last June, but stayed until the end of the congressional session was in sight. His new post of deputy to Ambassador Warren R. Austin at the United Nations, with the rank of Ambassador, was created by new legislation.

for a "rabbit hutch to live in"—"there are holes in the partition big enough to throw a Hoosier blacksnake through broadside"—and he concluded: "Let the people of Washington who gouge you every time you go in to buy something underwrite their own proposition."

Two members spearheaded the appeal for House approval of the Sesquicentennial funds—Mrs. Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), former chairman of the House District Committee, and Representative Louis C. Rabaut (D., Mich.).

Mrs. Norton said that from the speeches of the opponents "one would think the Sesquicentennial celebration was supposed to be for the District—in fact it is a national celebration."

Rabaut reminded the House the Sesquicentennial was authorized by the Republican Eightieth Congress, and he said "it remained for the Eighty-first Congress to implement it with funds."

In the windup of the House battle, Taber moved that the entire conference report on the supplemental money bill be returned to the conference committee, with instructions to insist on erasing the Sesquicentennial fund.

With leaders on both sides keeping a close check on the nip-and-tuck voting, the decision against the motion and for the Sesqui was reached in the final few minutes of vote switching.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) later called the conference report to final approval in the Senate.

Weather Aids Second Highest Crop Harvest

By The Associated Press

Good harvest weather is assuring the Nation of its second largest volume of crops in history and a record supply of corn for producing meat, dairy and poultry products.

Reporting this in its October crop summary, the Agriculture Department yesterday said also that farmers in the broad Great Plains region are making good progress in seeding winter wheat for harvest next year.

Conditions were sufficiently favorable during September, the department said, to boost total production prospects 1 percent despite a slight drop in the corn estimate. The total crop volume is indicated at 131 percent of the 1923-32 base, second only to last year's 137 percent.

This may be the last year for some time, however, that crop production approaches this year's level. With surpluses mounting in the case of cotton, corn, wheat, oilseeds and some lesser crops, the Government is preparing to take action to reduce output next year.

Large Yield of Most Crops

Controls of some kinds have been indicated for wheat, cotton, tobacco, corn and other crops.

With a record carryover of corn and relatively large carryovers of oats, barley and sorghum grain from last year, feed supplies on farms will be the largest ever available.

The 36,500,000 tons of food grains now estimated, though exceeded in each of the past three seasons, is larger than in any earlier year. Included is a bumper wheat crop of 1,126,000,000 bushels, virtually all of which has been harvested.

The department said harvest of oil seeds—soybeans, flaxseed and peanuts—shows larger outturns than had been forecast. Soybean production is now estimated only 4 percent below last year's record despite Government limitations on production. The peanut crop is nearly average.

Good curing weather for tobacco resulted in a crop of over two billion pounds or nearly a fifth more than average.

The new citrus crop will be smaller than last year due to unfavorable weather, particularly in Texas. Grapefruit production may be only three fourths as large as last season, but orange production may be about the same.

Vegetables for processing continued to move actively to processors throughout September as weather favored development of late crops. An aggregate of about 4,400,000 tons of processing vegetables is now expected, or about 10 per cent less than last year.

The high yields reported throughout the country are also being experienced in States near Washington, the report showed.

Maryland particularly showed improvement over last year, nearly every crop being estimated in the gain column.

The hot, dry summer in Virginia was reflected in the sharp drop in some of its crops. Wheat, hay, tobacco and potatoes all showed a drop.

While Maryland was showing a sharp increase in apples, Virginia was showing a slight decrease. This, however, could be charged to a poor crop in Maryland a year ago.

Norwegian Voters Back Labor's Rule

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The Norwegian Communist Party appeared today to have lost all but 1 of its 11 seats in Parliament as Premier Einar Gerhardsen's Labor government received an overwhelming vote of confidence in Norway's national elections.

With nearly complete returns from almost all rural areas and all cities except Oslo, the Communist Party's representation in the parliament (Storting) had been slashed from 11 seats to 1.

The Communist setback was termed especially significant since it was the first election held in any Atlantic Pact country since the treaty went into effect.

The Social Democratic Party of Gerhardsen picked up all the seats lost by the Communists, and perhaps one more from the Conservatives.

Gerhardsen hailed the results as a vote of confidence in his pro-Western foreign policy and a mandate to continue Norway's British-style socialism and planned economy.

The Social Democrats rolled up 779,080 of the ballots counted, according to latest unofficial returns. The same districts, in 1945, gave his party 499,506.

On the basis of these returns, the composition of the Storting for the next four years (with the number of seats now held by each party shown in parentheses) appears to be as follows:

Labor (Social Democrat) 85 (76), Conservatives 23 (25), Liberals 21 (20), Agrarians 12 (10), Christian People's 8 (8) and Communists 1 (11).

East Berlin Fetes Red President

WILHELM PIECK
Elected

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Oct. 11 (NYHT).—Three hundred thousand Soviet Zone Germans tonight celebrated with a torchlight parade the election of veteran Communist Wilhelm Pieck as the President of the new East German republic during ceremonies marked by the first open display of German militarism since the war.

In accompaniment to fireworks that lit the Soviet sector sky, an honor guard of the East Zone soldier-police broke into a goosestep as they passed the huge grandstand brightly outlined by scores of giant searchlights placed along Unter den Linden.

Earlier, the combined houses of the East Zone Parliament meeting together for the first time, unanimously elected Pieck, former co-chairman of the Communist-dominated Socialist Unity Party, as chief of state.

The speaker of the house read a formal statement, made public last night, in which Gen. Vassili Chuikov, Soviet Zone commander, announced that all powers presently exercised by the Soviet military administration would be turned over to the East German regime and that until a peace treaty was signed a control commission would replace the military administration.

In his acceptance speech, Pieck declared East Germany would never give up the fight to dislodge Western imperialism from West Germany and to win this area to allegiance to "the democratic German republic with its seat in Berlin which has legitimate power to speak for the entire German people."

He stressed the policy of friendship with the USSR and the people's democracies.

It was noted with interest that Vladimir Semyonov, who is expected to be accredited Russian ambassador to the new government after the signing of the peace treaty, congratulated Pieck on his election half an hour before it took place.

Moch Takes Premier Post In France

Paris, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Jules Moch, France's hard-boiled Socialist police boss, accepted nomination as Premier tonight, apparently satisfied he could form a new middle-of-the-road coalition government.

The 59-year-old former Minister of Interior informed President Vincent Auriol early tonight he would try to form a government to replace that of former Premier Henri Queuille, which fell six days ago over labor's demands for higher wages.

Moch appeared confident he could swing enough votes to insure him the necessary confidence vote in the National Assembly.

Moch is bitterly hated by Communists for his role in smashing the nation-wide Communist-led strike movements in 1947 and 1948.

When he left the office of President Auriol, Moch merely announced he had accepted the premiership.

Later he said he planned to go to the National Assembly Thursday for a vote of confidence, in which he would have to get 311 votes among the 620 members. But he said it was up to the Assembly's steering committee to set the exact day for reconvening of the Assembly.

and sympathy with Titoism or "Western imperialism," to simple denunciations by snoopers who had overheard suspicious bits of conversation.

Observers who made a 550-mile automobile trip through Bohemia and Moravia reported these developments among people of all classes:

1. Uneasiness and dread, even among those wearing the Communist Party membership badge, as to what all this is leading.

2. The government is having trouble, not only in its campaign to control the Roman Catholic Church, but also in its efforts to prod higher production out of the workers.

Workers in Moravska Ostrava, industrial city of 400,000, reported unrest, discontent and poor performances despite government and trade union efforts to popularize above-quota production.

Observers who talked with workers reported communism is losing ground in Moravska Ostrava, once strongly Communist.

Arrests were reported to be frequent and to be increasing among priests, who are spied on by Communist agents in church and out.

Despite the tensions there is calm on the surface. On the motor trip through the country, towns and villages seemed busy with routine work. There were no indications of military precautions against underground action. One could drive for miles without seeing as much as a traffic policeman.

Tito Demands Albania Act In 'Murder'

Belgrade, Oct. 11 (AP).—Marshal Tito, acting as his own Foreign Minister, demanded today that Albania punish Albanian soldiers for the "calculated and criminal murder" of a Yugoslav border patrolman.

In a note sent to the Albanian Legation, the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry also demanded that the Albanian government pay an indemnity of 500,000 dinars ($10,000) to the family of the slain patrolman, and inform the Yugoslav government of the punishment administered to "those who committed this murder."

The note charged that the Yugoslav was shot in the back Friday "from ambush." It said the incident showed the Albanian government's "nonpeaceloving and hostile character."

It declared Albania is pursuing an "adventurous policy, despite all protests and warnings" and Yugoslav offers to form a joint commission to investigate such border incidents.

Churchill Hits Minimum Pay

reason to believe that both the Labor and Conservative Parties now have "a strong impression" Prime Minister Attlee will not call the election until next spring.

Beaverbrook, in a signed article in his four million circulation London Daily Express yesterday, put forward an "Empire first" policy for Britain's recovery. One point called for a 6-pound ($16.80) weekly minimum wage.

"Lord Beaverbrook's opinions are his own," Churchill told an applauding Conservative parley on local affairs, "but it is my duty to say that they must not be taken as representing the considered policy of the Conservative Party.

"It is certainly not our intention to try to win votes by wholesale promises of higher wages at the present grave time."

Churchill said he inclined to the view of Arthur Deakin, a top man in the eight million-member Trades Union Congress. Deakin opposes a minimum wage, saying such a law might limit the bargaining power of the unions.

Britain has no minimum wage law, and the government is committed to a wage-freeze policy during its present money crisis.

The relations of the Conservative Party and Beaverbrook have had their rough spots lately. Beaverbrook, who sits in the House of Lords, was not sent a Conservative Party call to be present for an emergency debate on the Labor government's devaluation of the pound.

Beaverbrook accused the Conservatives of excommunicating him. The party leadership apologized, saying it thought he was out of the country.

Bradley Points to Russia As Sole World War Source

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the U. S. joint chiefs of staff, said yesterday that Russia is the only foreseeable source of war for the next 20 years.

He told the Inter-American Defense Board that if war comes "we will all be affected by it, and many of the Nations represented here will be in it."

The board, set up to plan for defense of North and South America under the 1947 Rio de Janeiro treaty, is composed of representatives of all 21 American republics including the United States.

Bradley said that the Western Democracies must maintain frontiers "on the boundaries of that nation or group of nations which threaten the welfare of the world."

This apparently was a reiteration of his Atlantic Pact testimony last May 3, when he told a Senate committee that America's first line of defense "lies in the heart of Europe."

Aiming his words at Russia, although not mentioning the Soviet Union by name, he told the board that ". . . there is, for the next 20 years, so far as we can foresee, now only one source from which such a (world) war could spring."

He explained the philosophy behind this Nation's emphasis on aid to Europe by saying that the limited assistance available must go to countries "most exposed" to possible Communist aggression.

He said this policy of pouring guns and money into western Europe might "continue for some time to come," but that did not mean the United States would neglect the defense of the Western hemisphere.

"First things come first," he said, "and there is no immediate threat of aggression from communism against our two continents."

Barkley Says Russia Hurts Europe Economy

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Vice President Alben W. Barkley today accused Russia of undermining Europe's economy to advance the cause of communism.

As a result, he told a Textile Institute meeting, the United States is in danger of being bled white to support the cold war.

This Nation joined the cold war, the Vice President said, because "the thing we're trying to preserve cannot be measured in money."

But, he added, our national budget now is 42 billion dollars, more than half of which is spending related to defense.

"I don't know how much longer our Government can stand the debt," he said.

Field Family's Third Member Now Missing

By the United Press

A third member of the Field family apparently has disappeared behind the Iron Curtain.

State Department officials said they have been unable to locate Mrs. Herta Visser Field, wife of former department official Noel Field who was previously reported missing somewhere in Europe.

Noel's brother, Herman Field, a Cleveland architect, also has vanished.

There was a growing fear here that the three were abducted by the Russian secret police or some international Communist terrorist group.

Mrs. Field was known to be in Prague, Czechoslovakia, in late August, two months after her husband vanished from the same city. She went to the Prague airport August 23 to meet a plane on which Herman Field was slated to arrive from Warsaw. The American embassy in Prague has been unable to locate her since.

Herman, who was accompanied by friends to a Polish airport to board the plane for Prague, failed to reach Prague.

The United States has already demanded that the Polish government explain his disappearance, and American envoys in Prague and Budapest, Hungary, have been directed to make searching inquiries about his brother Noel.

State Department officials are taking an increasingly serious view of the disappearances. These and similar incidents involving American citizens in Iron Curtain countries may produce new diplomatic protests in the near future.

Guay Trial Set Jan. 9

Quebec City, Que., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—J. Albert Guay, 31, accused of master minding the time-bomb murder of his wife and 22 others aboard a Canadian airliner September 9, was ordered today to stand trial on next January 9.

Victorious Figl to Organize New Coalition in Austria

Vienna, Oct. 11 (AP).—President Karl Renner instructed Chancellor Leopold Figl today to form a new Austrian government. Another coalition regime is in the making.

Figl's rightist People's Party retained its position as the strongest political group in parliamentary elections Sunday, winning 77 of 165 seats.

The Socialist Party, which has been allied with the People's Party in the government for four years, held its second place position with 67 seats. The two parties are pledged to continue in a coalition.

Both organizations lost some ground to the Pan-German League of Independents, which appealed to former Nazis for votes. The league collected 16 seats.

Figl plans to confer with Socialist leaders later this week on the makeup of the new government. There has been no agreement whether the League of Independents should be invited to join.

A People's Party spokesman said admission of the league might endanger the Austrian independence treaty, which still is a subject of debate among the Big Four powers.

Reds Unchecked Nearing Canton

Canton, Oct. 11 (AP).—Chinese Communist troops in an unchecked drive today thrust to within 40 miles of this dying Nationalist capital.

Canton was in its last days or hours as a capital. The next capital will be Chungking, the wartime government seat 600 miles to the northwest.

The Chinese Foreign Office abruptly wound up its business in the middle of the afternoon. That was about the time reports circulated that the Communists had seized Tsingyun, only 40 miles to the north.

Acting President Li Tsung-jen is expected to fly to Chungking Wednesday. Formal proclamation of Chungking as the capital is expeected about Saturday.

Premier Yen Hsi-shan, however, suddenly turned up on Formosa, the island province built into a fortress by Chiang Kai-shek. He recently has sided with Chiang in policy disputes with Li.

An official announcement said the Premier went to Formosa for consultations with Chiang.

This seemed to spike widespread and apparently trustworthy reports that Chiang had arrived in Canton. Chiang would possibly lose face if he came here and didn't remain. Only last July he vowed to perish in the defense of Canton if necessary.

United States Charge d'Affaires Robert Strong flew to Hongkong after removing the embassy shield from the Yokohama Specie Bank where he had his office. Strong, like most other diplomats, intends to spend a few days in Hongkong before going to Chungking. Some diplomats intend to stay in Hongkong almost indefinitely.

Nationalist military leaders still were talking of defending Canton to the last against the troops of Red Gen. Chen Keng. It was believed however, the Nationalists would pull out to the southwest.

3 Chinese Diplomatic Aides Return to Fold

Paris, Oct. 11 (AP).—Tuan Mao-lan, charge d'affaires for the Chinese National government in Paris, reported headway today in a campaign to check desertions by Chinese officials here to the Communist regime in Peiping.

Three members of the embassy staff have been persuaded to switch their allegiance back to the Nationalist government and "I do hope to convince" four other dissidents, Tuan said. All had signed a statement backing the Communists.

The two leaders in the switch to the Communist regime have been dismissed by orders from Canton and cannot remain in the embassy building, Tuan said. They are Lin Chi-han, former minister-counselor, and George Mong, former counselor.

The resignation of two Chinese diplomats in Britain came to light today. The Chinese Embassy in London said they were S. Y. Yang, vice consul in London, and C. C. Ho, vice consul in Liverpool. An embassy spokesman declined to say why the two stepped out. Both are returning to China.

U. N. to Form World WPA To Aid Arabs

Jaffa-Telaviv, Oct. 11 (NYHT).—An International Works Progress Administration under United Nations supervision will be set up to give temporary work and relief to Arab refugees, Gordon Clapp, chairman of the United Nations Economic Survey group, said today.

Clapp outlined temporary work projects, varying according to the locality and country, to include road building, terracing, reforestration and water supply on a small scale.

The projects would affect Arab countries more than Israel, where there are now 30,000 Arab refugees, according to the Israeli government, as compared with an estimated 740,000 in Arab countries. Most of the money would flow to Arab countries, particularly Trans-Jordan and Egypt.

Revealing that voluntary agencies had contributed as much to refugee aid as the United Nations, which set up a program costing 32 million dollars 12 months ago, Clapp predicted that a large part of the relief would still come from voluntary agencies.

Big Bird Blitzes Home in England, Rips Up Furniture

London, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—A housewife in war-blitzed Stamford Hill suburb today dug out from the damage to her home by a new airborne attack.

The new blitz was staged by a bird, which Mrs. M. Lazarus said was "easily a foot long."

The bird ripped the stuffings from Mrs. Lazarus' living-room cushions, slashed chair coverings, disarranged a bookcase and overturned a bowl of water on the carpet.

The housewife said the bird had been stealing her milk lately. Experts believed it had escaped from a zoo.

The woman has admitted she married five men and liver with 50 or 60 elderly widowers within the last five years.

Navy Blasts War Policy as 'Militarily Unsound, Morally Wrong'

been a guiding force in this democracy since its inception?"

Ofstie also contended that as Russia now has the atomic bomb, initiation of a campaign of "large-scale destruction of the homes and cities of the belligerent nations" may prevent establishment of a "stable world economy" after the war, regardless of who wins. "Hunger, poverty and disease" are the "greatest promoters of communism," he added.

Blandy, one of the Navy's ranking non-aviator admirals, did not attack strategic bombing or the B-36, as have prior witnesses. Ofstie spoke for the rebel admirals on this score. But the Atlantic Fleet commander, in a more sober appraisal of the situation than what has gone before, did challenge official Pentagon views in several respects, and generally went along with the Navy's "case."

He urged the necessity of maintaining balanced armed forces, including strong aircraft carrier, Marine Corps and amphibious units instant in readiness. While bowing to higher authority in the cancellation of the supercarrier now on "economy grounds," Blandy declared that larger flattops are required to handle the bigger planes coming along.

The United States will lose its "command of the seas" if not allowed to build such craft later, he added.

Later, under cross-examination, Representative Short (R., Mo.) asked Blandy if he would recommend passage of a law requiring the Department of Defense to build the big carrier.

"I certainly would urge reconsideration," was his reply.

Referring to Ofstie's argument against killing women and children with atomic bomb blasts, Representative Kilday (D., Tex.) contended that "while always deplorable," this "always had been incidental to warfare."

Blandy agreed, but said he was "opposed to that as a part of a country's military policy." Then he paused, and added thoughtfully:

"But if I felt—my superiors felt—that it was necessary to preserve the security of my country, I would do it."

Difficulties Stressed

Granting the potency of the atomic bomb, Blandy insisted that accuracy with it was necessary to destroy military targets and stressed the difficulties of hitting them in enemy territory from 40,000 feet.

Meanwhile, several Senators and Representatives attacked naval statements belittling the atomic bomb.

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Joint Atomic Committee, took the floor to deny that the destructive range of the atomic bomb is no more than a mile and a half. He said it was "silly" for Comdr. Eugene Tatom to give such an impression.

Tatom told the House committee Monday that you could stand at one end of the Washington Airport north-south runway and escape serious injury from an A-bomb falling at the other end.

Recalled yesterday to back up his statement, he read from a report of the United States Strategic Bombing Survey on the effects of the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It declared that "beyond 6500 feet radiation effects appeared to drop off very sharply," and flash burns at less distance than that. He cited figures from the report that mortality beyond 6562 feet is less than one half of 1 percent. Length of the Washington runway is 6855 feet.

Other Reports Quoted

But Representative Kilday (D., Tex.) read from other official reports quoting damage up to much larger distances, and Representative Price (D., Ill.) pointed out that we have much more powerful A-bombs today than in 1945.

Price declared the statement showed "surprising ignorance" in the Navy of the bomb's power. McMahon contended the admirals were taking a sour-grapes attitude.

"They wanted the supercarrier in order to deliver A-bombs," he said. "Now that they haven't got the supercarrier, they don't find the bomb very good."

Blandy came to Tatom's defense last night. Representative Anderson (R., Calif.) asked the admiral if he felt his statement "silly" or "fantastic."

The Bikini commander said Tatom was merely quoting official statistics. Standing at 6800 feet from an A-bomb blast, he added, "you might get a permanent sunburn and your hair might fall out, but you'd probably suffer no permanent injury."

Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) attacked the whole idea of public hearings on our defense policy. He said they gave valuable information to a "hostile power" by revealing low Navy morale. Any similar airing of Army grievances might convince an enemy that now is the time to attack us.

This congressional reaction followed a long-range tangle between Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee over the "damage to national security" that may result from the hearings.

Johnson had so charged in a letter sent to Vinson and made public at the Pentagon. It asked for a chance to answer the Navy charges. The Congressman retorted yesterday that Johnson is the one who has "damaged national security by cutting down on the Navy's offensive power."

He said that since Johnson had communicated with his committee "through the press" he would reply through the press that Johnson would be heard "along with anyone else."

There was also congressional support for the Navy. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) charged that unification is being used as a "smoke screen" for a "secret, underhanded" effort to destroy the Navy. Johnson is using "methods of a dictatorship" to cut naval aviation, she declared. And Representative Latham (R., N. Y.) issued a statement defending Capt. John G. Crommelin for his "courageous fight."

Meanwhile Johnson called at the White House. He said afterward he discussed the questions raised by the congressional hearings and his reply when called.

Brig. Gen. Vernon E. Megee, assistant director of Marine Corps aviation, told the House committee that the Air Force today has so emphasized strategic aviation that it neglects tactical air.

While Air Force close support of ground troops in the last months of the European war was good, before that it was marked "by indifference to the demands of the ground forces, inability to provide the effective close support requested, and a certain ineptness in distinguishing friend and foe."

Megee charged that USAF pays "lip service" to ground support but continue their preoccupation with "independent air operations."

He declared that the USAF forces "earmarked for Army support" exist "largely on paper." If war came tomorrow the Navy and Marine Corps would have to provide the major part of such support, and current Pentagon plans call for cutting these in half, Megee said.

Noting that Russia's air force is largely "tactical," the Marine urged the committee to ask the Air Force what they had to oppose it.

Capt. John H. Sides, deputy assistant chief of naval operations for guided missiles, told the committee that since the war the armed forces have dropped from their research programs work on antiaircraft missiles designed to shoot down planes traveling 300 to 400 miles an hour—normal top speed of the B-36 except at its "sprint" performance with jet boosters.

His argument was directed at the Navy contention that the B-36 would not get through Russian defenses to drop its A-bombs. For, said Sides, we have supersonic guided missiles approaching operational test that "will seek out and destroy the really fast jet bombers now on the drawing boards.

Russia, he went on, took over the German "Wasserfall" rocket, a 1700-mph rocket with a proximity fuse, nearing completion at the war's end. The Russians captured it "lock, stock and barrel," Sides said, getting not only the missiles, but also the scientists and plants, and have had plenty of time to perfect it.

Admiral Ofstie told the committee that the "majority of responsible, senior officers of the Navy agree with my views."

When the latter had finished his statement, Representative Cole (R., N. Y.) praised it as "one of the finest military papers" he had seen. It poses "extremely disturbing" problems, he added. Representative Johnson (R., Calif.) agreed.

"We consider," said Ofstie, "that strategic air warfare, as practiced in the past and as proposed for the future, is militarilyu nsound and of limited effect, is morally wrong, and is decidedly harmful to the stability of a postwar world."

He said the Pentagon concept of "instant retaliation" with A-bombs when attacked has produced "an illusion of power" and "a kind of bomb-rattling jingoism."

"In recent weeks," Ofstie added, "we have been made aware of the fact that we are not alone in our possession of the atomic weapon, which had been the basis of this illusory strength. Perhaps now more prudent and realistic policies will get the attention which they deserve."

Hospital Cleared In Forrestal Death

By the United Press

A naval board of inquiry yesterday cleared Bethesda Naval Hospital personnel of any blame in the suicide leap last May by former Defense Secretary James Forrestal.

In a report approved by Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, the board said the former Defense Chief was in a state of "mental depression" preceding his death.

It gave no other explanation of why the one-time Wall Street financier left his de luxe bedroom on the sixteenth floor of the Bethesda (Md.) Naval Hospital May 22, crossed the deserted corridor into a diet kitchen and jumped out an unguarded window.

The board's findings were couched in formal, factual language and contained no hint of the tragic atmosphere that surrounded Forrestal's suicide.

It said he died "as a result of injuries, multiple, extreme, received incident to a fall from a high point in the tower, Building One, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md."

It said his behavior during his hospital stay prior to his death was "indicative of mental depression."

But it said that the treatment and precautions taken by hospital officials "were in agreement with accepted psychiatric practice and commensurate with the evident state of the patient at all times."

". . . the death was not caused in any manner by the intent, fault, negligence or inefficiency of any person or persons in the naval service or connected therewith."

The five-man board's report was first submitted to Rear Admiral Morton D. Willcutts, head of the Bethesda Naval Hospital, on May 30, and went to Matthews in late June or early July.

No explanation was given for the delay in publication.

British Airlines Boost Efficiency, Cut Deficit

London, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Britain's nationalized airlines had a deficit of $27,272,000 for 1948, a government spokesman said tonight.

The deficit was 12 percent less than that for 1947, the spokesman said, because of staff economies and improved efficiency.

The address of Guy H. Fuller, 20, whose conviction on a seduction charge was upheld Monday by the Virginia Supreme Court, was printed erroneously as 66 New York ave. ne., in The Washington Post yesterday. Fuller's correct address is 66 New York ave. nw. The Washington Post regrets the error.

By Truman

Tulsa Man Picked for AF Post

President Truman yesterday nominated Harold C. Stuart of Oklahoma to be Assistant Secretary of the Air Force.

Stuart

Stuart, a former Tulsa lawyer, has been special consultant to Air Force Secretary Symington since May 3, 1949.

He was born in Oklahoma City July 4, 1912 and was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1936 with a bachelor of laws degree.

After practicing law in Tulsa from 1936 until 1941, he was appointed judge of the Tulsa Court of Common Pleas by Gov. Leon C. Phillips.

In July, 1942, he resigned from the court and entered the Army Air Corps as a first lieutenant. After studying in various intelligence schools he was transferred to England as intelligence staff officer of advance headquarters of the 9th Air Force.

Later he served with combat intelligence forces in England, France, Luxembourg, Belgium and Germany.

In 1945 Stuart was transferred to the U. S. Air Component of the Shaef mission in Norway as intelligence staff officer.

He was promoted to lieutenant colonel in August, 1945. Stuart left the Air Force in February, 1946. On May 3, 1949, he was appointed specail consultant to the Air Secretary.

Stuart and his wife, the former Miss Joan Skeloy of Tulsa, have two adopted Norwegian children.

MacArthur Call Denied

By The Associated Press

The White House yesterday branded as "100 percent inaccurate" a report that the Joint Chiefs of Staff, with President Truman's approval, have aske' Gen. Douglas MacArthur to return home.

Reporters questioned Press Secretary Charles G. Ross on a published story saying MacArthur was requested to return next month for high-level conferences in Washington.

"That is 100 percent inaccurate," Ross said.

A press memorandum from the Defense Department said:

"Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, chief of Army public information, today denied published reports that Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, is carrying to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur a presidentially approved request of the Joint Chiefs of Staff that General MacArthur return to the United States next month.

Own Bomb Blasts Jet Plane, Kills Pilot As 1000 Watch

Eglin Air Base, Fla., Oct. 11 (AP). A jet fighter's own bomb destroyed the plane in flight today during an Air Force capsule-size war to show ground support methods. The pilot was killed.

The plane, a Republic F-84 Thunderjet, had just completed a machinegun strafing and parafrag bomb attack against a target representing an enemy command post.

Seconds beyond the target, a flash occurred, the plane came apart, the main section skidding to an explosive finish. At least 1000 student officers and guests saw the tragedy.

Officers who inspected the wreckage said there was no doubt that one of the arafrag bombs had exploded beside the plane.

It was speculated that the parachute caught on the container, permitting the bomb to swing out and back against the aircraft, pulling out the chute arms the bombs, with the fuse set for detonation on contact.

Officials identified the dead pilot as Second Lieut. Robert S. Kavanaugh, son of Mrs. Lois Kavanaugh of Roanoke, Va. Kavanaugh was a member of the Fifty-fifth Fighter Squadron, Twentieth Fighter Group, based at Shaw Field, Sumter, S. C.

A parafrag bomb weighs about 25 pounds and is designed to spread damage over a wide area. It is particularly useful against personnel.

Hughes Aides Fined $20,000

Honolulu, Oct. 11 (AP).—Federal District Court agreed with the Government that two employes of Hughes Tool Co. tried to arrange illegally for the purchase of six war surplus planes.

Glenn E. Odekirk and Joseph V. Petrali of Los Angeles, accused of using two veterans as "fronts" in the transaction were fined $10,000 each yesterday.

Frederick M. Llewellyn, Navy veteran and used car dealer, was fined $5000. The second veteran, Stanley Sabihon, Honolulu, was not charged.

The Government charged Odekirk and Petrali conspired with the former servicemen to purchase the six Douglas C-47s through the War Assets Administration in 1946 for $105,000 with the veterans' priorities.

Hughes Tool Co. previously paid a $12,000 civil penalty. It will enter a plea in a few days in the criminal case, attorneys said. United States Attorney Ray J. O'Brien told Federal Judge Delbert E. Metzger that Howard Hughes, millionaire owner of the company, had nothing to do with the conspiracy.

N. Y. Firms Plead For Color Video

By the United Press

Two television manufacturers who have been experimenting with color sets, estimated yesterday that they could market them at prices ranging from $220 to $304.

They said they could manufacture converters for black-and-white sets ranging in price from $80 to $100.

Presidents S. W. Gross of the Teletone Radio Corp., New York, and David H. Cogan, of the Air King Products Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., testified at Federal Communication Commission hearings on the advisability of licensing color television immediately.

They said they could get into production of color sets quickly and could offer adapters and converters in 60 to 90 days.

Use Sequential System

Gross said his engineers estimated it would cost about $100 to convert one of their present teletone sets to combination color and monochrome. The company's 10-inch table model receiver which now retails at $150, he said, could be rebuilt into a combination set for an additional cost of only $70.

Cogan reported that the convention 10-inch Air King table model, retailing for $199, could be changed into a combination receiver for a top of $279. The deluxe model with a 12½ inch magnified image would cost up to $304, he said.

Both manufacturers told the FCC their experimental equipment was made under the sequential color system developed by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

They also said they were eager to start building color sets and said they thought the rest of the industry would follow their lead.

Inventor Criticizes Rival Device

After their testimony, Dr. Peter C. Goldmark, inventor of the CBS system, returned to the stand before the FCC to comment on the tests Monday of the simultaneous color TV system developed by the Radio Corporation of America.

"My over-all comment," he said, "is that it has demonstrated that not only is it very much in the laboratory stage, but also that it has such serious problems as to both system and apparatus that there is great doubt it will ever emerge from the laboratory."

Goldmark added that during the RCA tests on different receivers, each produced "color pictures of markedly different hues," and that "no flesh tones or true white were visible on any color receiver."

"Faces were dark red, purple, green or orange," Goldmark said.

Goldmark also told the commission that Columbia would permit its rivals and opponents of its color system to test its equipment in the field. He said CBS would not require licensing for the tests.

Mistrial Halts Tucker Case

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—The multi-million dollar Preston Tucker mail fraud case was declared a mistrial today and will start from scratch again Monday.

Tucker is the man who planned a radical rear-engine automobile that never got into mass production. He and seven associates went on trial in Federal Court October 4 charged with mail fraud and violations of the Federal Securities Law.

Testimony of a Government witness that one of the defendants had a 15-year-old criminal record ended the case.

Federal Judge Walter J. Labuy held this was a prejudicial remark. He dismissed the jury, ordered 100 new jurors summoned and set a new trial for October 17.

The trial-blazing testimony was given Monday by Mark Mourne, Denver old company employe, and a cousin of Tucker. Mourne, former secretary for the Tucker Corp., said Harold Karsten, alias Abraham Karatz, had "a criminal record."

Lustron Prefab House Firm Faces Congressional Inquiry

Congress was asked yesterday to investigate reports that there has been political intrigue, mismanagement and waste of Reconstruction Finance Corp. funds by the Lustron Corporation.

Representative Albert E. Cole (R., Kan.), said he will introduce a resolution calling for an investigation.

He said Lustron, a Columbus, Ohio, firm that makes prefabricated houses, has been losing one million dollars a month and that RFC has been footing the bill to the tune of $37,500,000 since 1947.

He said that Lustron must produce 700 house a month to break even, that its October production will be less than 100 houses, and it hasn't been able to sell the houses it has produced.

"Over three million dollars worth of houses are crated and standing forlornly on trailers at the Lustron plant, with no takers," he said. "The problem of sales and distribution of these houses is still as much a mystery as it was when the President approved the loan. Neither RFC nor Lustron has any plan for its solution."

Carl G. Strandlund, president of Lustron, in a statement issued at Columbus, Ohio, said that "the management has and will continue to conduct the affairs of this company with the public interest foremost in our minds.

"The affairs of Lustron have been investigated and examined by Congress on three previous occasions and found to be in order."

He added that the RFC and Lustron are working on a program for sale and distribution of Lustron homes which shows "steady progress."

2 Revolts Jar CIO, Facing Convention

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Revolt and counter-revolt jarred the Congress of Industrial Organizations yesterday as the six-million-member labor combine prepared for its eleventh annual convention in Cleveland October 31.

The pro-Communist leadership of the Farm Equipment Workers, it was disclosed yesterday, has voted secretly to merge the 20,000-member union with the left-ist-dominated half-million-member United Electrical Workers.

The FE-UE move, initiated by a secret session of FE's executive board late in September, was made in direct defiance of an order of the CIO executive board for the smaller union to merge with the right-wing United Auto Workers. The million-member UAW already has more than 100,000 workers in the farm equipment field, many of whom seceded from FE.

A second revolt involved the CIO's Gas, Coke, and chemical Workers, once a stronghold for the leftists but today a right-wing bower. Word was received here yesterday that two locals of the Gas-Coke international union, with around 1500 members at the Celetex plant in New Orleans, voted in secret meeting to break away from the parent union and set up an independent Southern Chemical Workers Union.

Reasons Not Clear

Officials here accused Vice President C. W. Dannenberg, and District Director Harold L. Zebel of leading the rebellion, but were not clear whether the CIO right-left feuding or other factors were behind the secession move.

The Farm Equipment Workers, led by pro-Communist Grant Oakes, sought several years ago to enter the United Auto Workers as a special department. At the time, Walter Reuther, a militant anti-Communist, was president of the UAW, but the executive board of the big auto union was then dominated by a left-oriented majority. Reuther successfully fought off the merger on the ground that under the proposal FE would be coming into the auto union with special privileges.

In 1947, Reuther and the right-wing bloc won virtually complete control of the UAW leadership, and thereafter sought to take over the left-wing FE in a move to end the jurisdictional strife between the two. The CIO right-wing leadership, which since the end of World War II has been steadily gaining in strength over the lefties, backed this merger move. FE now is under mandate to merge with UAW, and faces the loss of its CIO charter if it fails to comply by convention time.

Yesterday, UAW sought a special bargaining election in an effort to win over 400 office workers at International Harvester-McCormick from the Farm Equipment Workers. The right-wing UAW represents the workers of 7 Harvester plants; the left-wing FE, the employes of 11 Harvester plants.

Decision of the leftish leaders of FE and UE to amalgamate their unions serves to intensify the bitter feeling between the right and left factions in the CIO. The right-wingers, claiming five million adherents in 40 unions, are planning punitive action against the pro-Communists, around one million members in 12 unions, at the forthcoming convention.

Some believe the left-wing unions will pull out and form a pro-Communist labor federation. Others believe the left-wing unions will be thrown out through charter revocation. Still others believe Philip Murray, CIO president, who has always acted cautiously in his dealings with the pro-Reds since he became president in 1941, will beat down the Commies through action against individual unions and officers.

Strong Control at Top

The left-wingers in UE—largest of the pro-Communist CIO unions— have strong control of leadership at the top, but hold only a 3-2 majority among the rank and file. Any move to pull out or throw out the UE will split the union in two, the right-wingers staying with the CIO.

The mine, mill and smelter workers, claiming some 100,000 members, is one of the loudest and most active left-wing unions in the CIO. Although opposing CIO policy and attacking President Murray personally, it has decided to pay up $20,000 in dues arrears to appear at the convention to fight to stay in the CIO. Other of the lefty group have announced similar intentions.

In announcing the rebellious action of the Farm Equipment Workers yesterday, Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president and director of organization, said the CIO will throw its weight behind those in the FE who will oppose the merger with UE.

Haywood Gives Orders

Haywood, meanwhile, ordered his Southern field representatives to join the right-wing leadership of the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers in quelling the revolt in that 85,000-member union.

The Gas-Coke union was once part of the United Mine Workers' catch-all District 50, and broke away to join the CIO early in the '40s. Right-wingers led by President Martin Wagner fought it out with lefties for union control, and only a few months ago succeeded in ousting the last pro-Communist local with some 1100 members in New York City.

Officials here said Vice President Dannenberg, who is leading the Southern revolt, was a fence-sitter in the right-left fight. Several locals in the South have already signified their intention not to participate in the breakway move, they added.

R. A. Norton, 'Town Crier,' To Retire

Ralph A. Norton, Washington's twentieth century town crier, will retire November 30 after 34 years in the District government—eight of them as author of 250 city proclamations.

The District Commissioners yesterday reluctantly approved Norton's retirement effective on his fifty-fifth birthday ini November, and appointed Gustav A. Turner, Inspections Department administrative officer, to his post of assistant secretary to the Board of Commissioners.

Turner Promoted — Norton Leaving

Norton has had that job for eight years, calling on the citizenry to hang out flags, pet their dogs and study Brazilian customs on various occasions.

Before that Norton was secretary to seven successive Commissioners, starting with Louis Brownlow in 1920. In time, Norton did not merely take letter dictation from the city fathers, he wrote the letters for their signatures.

During this period, he recalled yesterday, he did everything from stenography to calming customers swindled at city markets. One disgruntled taxpayer not only spilled a torrent of words at Norton but also carried a gun strapped to her leg. Norton called the building guards and had the complainant hustled off to jail.

His successor, Turner, 40, has been administrative officer in the Inspections Department since January, 1948. He formerly was a Welfare Department social worker, who investigated mental cases. His home is at 1884 Columbia rd. nw. The promotion increases his salary from $4228 to $5232 a year.

Effort to Fix Juvenile Wage Scale Urged

By The Associated Press

A University of Chicago educator proposed yesterday that labor cooperate with industry in working out a juvenile wage scale.

Dr. Robert J. Havighurst, professor of education and secretary of the committee on human development at the University of Chicago, said that a formal wage scale for juveniles somewhat lower than that demanded by adults would help youth in acquiring jobs and in making a transition from high school to the outside. He did not suggest specific wage figures.

Havighurst spoke at a conference of 200 educators on methods of improving high school training to prepare American youth more fully for making a living.

Havighurst suggested that development of a juvenile wage scale "is the line to work on."

Frederick H. Bair, Albany, chief of curriculum development for the New York State Education Department, suggested the wisdom of planning for high school needs during a depression.

Bair said it might be wise to set up a commission of educators to "block out in time of serenity, and have ready for use in time of need, a plan—something like a civilian defense plan—to care for youth during an employment crisis."

U. S. Diplomats to Plan Red Propaganda Attack

Rome, Oct. 11 (AP).—Lewis W. Douglas, United States Ambassador to Britain, said today that a London meeting of American diplomats from eastern Europe will plan coordinated counter-attacks against Communist propaganda.

Douglas, here on vacation, told a reporter the meeting set for October 24-25 promises to be of "utmost importance" and will be followed by other such conferences.

Ching Starts Steel Strike Talks Thursday

Cyrus S. Ching, Federal conciliation chief, will meet with representatives of Bethlehem Steel in New York City Thursday, initiating a series of discussions with management aimed at finding a steel strike peace formula.

The meeting will be the first direct effort by the Federal Government to end the steel walkout since it began October 1.

Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said there was "no significance" in his meeting first with Bethlehem.

Knows U. S. Steel Stand

Other Government officials here pointed out that Federal mediators had concentrated on U. S. Steel in their efforts to prevent the strike and that therefore Ching already was intimately familiar with the position of the Nation's No. 1 steel producer.

During the next several days, Ching said, he also would conduct informal talks with U. S. Steel and other leading companies, then meet with President Philip Murray and other leaders of the striking 500,000 United Steel Workers. William Margolis, his top assistant will participate in the peace talks.

Strikers Applaud Murray

Murray, meanwhile, spoke to 15,000 loudly applauding strikers in Youngstown, Ohio, yesterday to begin his planned tour of the steel strike centers. He assured the strikers that "before long we will all be happy."

"The strike will be ended, and the Steel Workers will be victors," Murray declared. "The American people will be the beneficiary."

Murray will take the union case to the country in a Nation-wide broadcast tonight.

The Steel Workers are on strike for noncontributory welfare benefits; that is, social insurance and pensions, for which the cost is to be borne entirely by the employers.

Today, John L. Lewis and his aides will meet with representatives of the coal producers at Charleston and White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for direct collective bargaining sessions. The meetings were called at the request of Ching. Some 400,000 soft coal miners have been out since September 1), striking for contract improvements.

At Coldwater, Ohio, William M. Werner, general manager of the new idea division of Avco Manufacturing Corp., warned that farmers will feel the full impact of the steel strike early next spring when they start soil preparation, tillage and planting. There'll be a break in the line of supply of farm equipment, Werner predicted.

Virginia Doctors Veto Reciprocity

In Virginia

M. D. Group Bans Negro Members

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Old Point Comfort, Va., Oct. 11. Virginia physicians have turned thumbs down on pleas of their compatriots practicing near Washington, D. C., for medical reciprocity with Washington doctors.

Members of the House of Delegates of the Medical Society of Virginia, in annual meeting here, voted not to request special State legislation to permit physicians practicing on one side of the Potomac to treat patients on the other side with unlimited $1 out-of-State licensing.

The District authorizes the $1 "borderline certificates" but recently issued a new regulation drastically restricting such practice. The new order, in effect only one week, was rescinded to give Virginia doctors a chance to change their own $50 licensing fee law for out-of-State doctors.

No vote count was taken on the reciprocity proposals so overwhelming was the sentiment against the laws being changed, delegates said. Only the proponents, the physicians from Arlington and Fairfax Counties and Alexandria, voted solidly for a change, one delegate said.

Admittedly disappointed in the outcome, Dr. John B. Leary of Arlington said the house's failure to make such a recommendation probably kills all chances of passage of special legislation. It will be introduced, however, at Virginia's next General Assembly in January, he said.

Dr. Leary said the next most practical thing to do is to recommend to all Virginia physicians who bring their patients to Washing that they apply for the full $50 reciprocal license available to Virginia doctors in the District as well as in many States of the Union. Many already have such licenses and have not depended on the special $1 "borderline certificates," he said.

Some 61 Virginia physicians have been granted the $1 "borderline certificates" but many of this number have used them but little for years, Dr. Leary said.

By a Post Reporter

Old Point Comfort, Va., Oct. 11. The Medical Society of Virginia today refused to open the organization to Negro physicians by a 6-vote margin, 37-31.

The unprecedented proposal to take in Negroes as members was made at an official meeting here of the society's house of delegates.

The measure was introduced with unanimous recommendation for its passage by a special committee of three past presidents of the society. Proponents said a similar resolution will be introduced at the next annual meeting of the society and "will probably be passed." They pointed out that had only four delegates who voted against the measure "seen the way" to vote for it, the society would now be open to Negro physicians, the house action, they said, was the first ever taken on the question.

Officially announcing the matter, society leadership termed the close vote "a recognition of the desirability of extending the opportunities of Negro physicians" in Virginia.

Past presidents Drs. Walter B. Martin of Norfolk; Hugh P. Trout of Roanoke, and J. Morrison Hutcheson comprised the special committee.

Order Fixes Responsibility

The District Commissioners yesterday issued an order outlining responsibilities of the superintendent, chief of staff, and deputy superintendent of Gallinger Hospital.

The order was prepared at the request of the officials to clarify relationships. According to Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting health officer, no changes are made in the present line of command.

The superintendent will have "complete authority over the entire hospital" except for Health Department supervision of the Rapid Treatment Center, Crippled Children's Clinic, and several Hospital Permit Bureau workers employed in the admissions office.

The chief of staff will have "complete responsibility for and authority over the care and treatment of all patients" at Gallinger and students of medical schools working at the hospital will be under his jurisdiction.

The deputy superintendent will supervise business administration, linen service, housekeeping and utilities, and coordinate administrative services among departments.

District Lauded For FEP Plan

The District branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People yesterday commended the District Commissioners for deciding to set up a fair employment practices program in the city government.

Stephen G. Spottswood, president, wrote the Board of Commissioners that the decision was a "forward step in bringing the full measure of democracy to the Nation's Capital."

He asked that a copy of the order establishing the program be forwarded when arrangements are completed.

Philippines' Hero-Priest Gets Medal

A Belgian priest who simultaneously succored sick Allied prisoners and worked with the underground in the Philippines in the last war was honored here yesterday.

Fr. Marques

He is the Rev. Andrew G. Marques, now a member of the Immaculate Heart Mission in Arlington. In ceremonies at headquarters, Military District of Washington, Father Marques received the Medal of Freedom with Bronze Palm from Col. John T. Cole, commander of MDW.

A member of the Belgian Fathers' Mission in the mountain province of Baquio from 1942 to 1945, Father Marques fed and paid hospital expenses of British and American internees.

At the same time, he joined the underground when the Japanese "were always suspicious" of religious men and were killing many priests.

Present at the ceremonies were the Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin M. Elizalde; a Belgian, Edmund P. Gallebaut, and others.

Board Speeds Indigent Aid

District Commissioners yesterday moved to end a deadlock delaying adoption of new contracts with private hospitals here covering payment for care of indigents during the current fiscal year.

The city heads ordered Acting Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger to prepare a list of revised specifications for the contract so that Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West may draft it for consideration by the Commissioners.

The deadlock came to light when Auditor A. R. Pilkerton complained he was unable to handle obligation of funds until the contracts are approved. West was asked why the delay and he declared the Health Department after originally forwarding specifications and receiving a contract draft, then proposed amendments. These were inserted and the draft returned to the Health Department. And there it has stayed, West declared.

D. C. Aide Hits Self-Service Meat Counter

The self-service meat counter, while popular with the public has been a headache to the District Department of Weights, Measures and Markets, Thomas J. Kennedy, director, reported yesterday.

In his annual report to the Commissioners, Kennedy said his inspectors have maintained "constant surveillance of these meat counters."

"The difficulty seems to be mainly due to shrinkage of meat—such shrinkage has not, as yet, been controlled. Further, employment of inexperienced help in many of the stores operating these counters has resulted in many packages of meat being marked with prices in excess of the proper charge."

Kennedy said store owners have been warned that violations would result in prosecution. He said a new method of meat sales here known as the "budget meat plan" was investigated and no violations of proper weight were found.

Truman Requests Senate to Take Olds Roll Call

By The Associated Press

President Truman has requested that the Senate take a rollcall vote on the nomination of Leland Olds for another term on the Federal Power Commission, Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), the Democratic leader, told the Senate last night.

The Senate Commerce Committee has voted against confirming Olds.

Critics point to admittedly radical articles written by Olds years ago.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), a foe of Olds, pressed Lucas to fix a time for such a vote, but Lucas said he was "not going to be badgered or intimidated."

If the Senate doesn't confirm Olds, said Senator Murray (D., Mont.), big gas producers will be able to get 10 billion dollars more for their known reserves of natural gas. He said Olds would protect consumers.

'Mickey Finns' Suggested as Alcohol Check

By a Post Reporter

Old Point Comfort, Va., Oct. 11. Delayed action "Mickey Finns" incorporated in all bottled spirits to insure against excessive drinking were proposed here today by a Richmond neuropsychiatrist.

The prebottling doctoring of alcoholic beverages, he said, would be adjusted to allow "convivial drinkers" two or three or even four drinks without sickening effect. Heavier drinkers however would be made violently sick.

Dr. R. Finley Gayle, jr., professor of neuropsychiatry at the Medical College of Virginia, made the "suggestion" in discussing "the alcoholic problem." He spoke in the psychiatric section of the 102d annual meeting of the Medical Society of Virginia now in progess here.

The Richmond authority did not use the term "Mickey Finn," the barroom drink for getting rid of undesirable patrons. Instead, he suggested the introduction of a "sensitizing substance similar to antabuz," the Scandinavian treatment of ordeal for alcohol addiction.

Antabuz, which has already been held responsible for several deaths when used as a cure for alcoholism, brings nausea, heart palpitations, violent vomiting and other pains to those who imbibe after its administration.

If a substance similar to antabuz was used, Dr. Gayle told the assembled psychiatrists, "convivial drinking could be indulged in by all without fear of drunkenness or chronic alcoholism . . ."

Dr. Gayle pointed out that antabuz is not toxic even in large doses, unless ethyl alcohol paralydehyde or some similar chemical is imbibed. His suggestion was termed "an intriguing idea" by Dr. Harvey B. Haag, also of Richmond, who was chosen to discuss Dr. Gayle's paper. Dr. Haag virtually vetoes the whole idea, however.

"I've always been against adding anything to alcohol," Dr. Haag said with a smile, "and the reaction to antabuz can scare the life out of a patient."

He added more seriously that Dr. Gayle in his summation of the alcohol problem said that though excessive use of alcohol "has probably caused more heartache and troubles than any one other thing in the world the temperate use has given much pleasure and happiness to many."

In middle age, Dr. Gayle said the temperate use of alcohol eases tension, relaxes the nerves, helps support circulation and reduces blood pressure—all benefits to the middle-aged.

Food Chain Chiefs Meet Here

More than 1400 food chain store executives from all over the country and several from abroad converged on Washington last night for the 16th annual meeting of the National Association of Food Chains.

Opening at 9:45 a. m. today, sessions will run through Saturday evening. The Statler Hotel will be headquarters for the meeting.

Highlight of today's program will be a 12:45 p. m. talk by Senator Clinton P. Anderson, former Secretary of Agriculture.

The Senator will talk on "Look at Mother Hubbard Now," a take-off on jibes from Washington newsmen who used to heckle him about Mother Hubbard's bare "cupboard" during the food rationing days when Anderson was Secretary of Agriculture.

Lansing P. Shield, president of the Grand Union Co. and chairman of the National Association of Food Chains executive committee, will give the keynote address at the convening morning meeting.

Among the foreign contingent registering yesterday at the Statler were Dr. G. J. M. deGruyter and his brother, Paul, who direct one of the largest food chains in Holland. Other foreign visitors include a group from Canada and representatives from British food chains.

In special topic conferences during the week, the executives will run the gamut of food merchandising and business problems confronting them.

Some of the panel discussions: "Food Chain Developments in Europe," "What Can Chain Food Distributors Do to Help the Farmer?" "What Can Chain Food Distributors Do to Help the Consumer?"

Exhibits of more than 50 manufacturers of the latest retail distribution equipment will be on display to the public at the Statler all day and during the early evening.

Burgman's Trial For Treason Begins

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Herbert Burgman was variously depicted yesterday as one who traitorously spread the "Nazi poison" during the war—and as a mentally irresponsible, Gestapo-hounded man who broadcast for the Germans under threat of death itself.

The treason trial of the former State Department employe opened in District Court with the selection of a jury of five women and seven men—ranging in occupation from plumber to physicians. Maximum penalty is death.

The prosecution described Burgman as a man who "hired himself out to the enemy to destroy the unity of this country" during the war—a man who himself once claimed he was "one of the best propagandists Hitler had."

U. S. Attache's Clerk.

Victor Woerheide, special assistant to the Attorney General, traced Burgman's career from his birth 53 years ago in Hokah, Minn., through his World War I Army service and his subsequent employment as chief clerk for the American Military Attache in the United States Embassy in Berlin.

Refusing to be repatriated after Pearl Harbor, the prosecution charged, Burgman began broadcasting under the alias of "Joe Scanlon" over a station called "DEBUNK": a program which was "anti-Semitic, anti-Roosevelt, anti-British Empire and pro-German."

Burgman, a bald-headed man with overhanging, John L. Lewis eyebrows as his most striking feature, sat with arms folded through the outlining of the charges, a half-smile on his face. He occasionally leaned over to whisper something to his attorney, James J. Laughlin.

Laughlin States Defense

Laughlin said his client had "no intent to betray" his country. "Through no fault of his own he was no longer considered as owing allegiance to the United States." He was "mentally irresponsible." His broadcasting was "done under compulsion—under threat of death."

"He was at all times proud of the land of his birth," Laughlin declared.

The prosecution submitted a list of 60 witnesses it might call. Among them were Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray or his "authorized representative," and George F. Kennan, director of the State Department's policy planning staff.

Kennan was second in charge of the American Embassy in Berlin at the time of Pearl Harbor. He is due to testify today.

Got Doctorate in Berlin

Woerheide frequently referred to the defendant as "Dr. Burgman." Judge Alexander Holtzoff ruled out a detailed biography but the prosecutor told reporters Burgman was graduated cum laude from the University of Berlin with a doctorate in economics.

The prosecutor said Burgman told a friend soon after the war started: "Oh, the United States is going to lose this war. Germany's going to win it. I'm going to stay over here."

The jury, which includes three Government employes, is as follows:

Homer R. Baker, 1725 Highwood pl. se., Navy Research Laboratory physicist; Helen C. Canty, 2701 Connecticut ave. nw., secretary with the Carrier Corp.; Mrs. Virginia B. Daly, 1017 11th st. nw., switchboard operator; Robert W. Draper, 4410-A Livingston rd. se., Interstate Commerce Commission clerk; Mrs. Anna E. Gaum, 1650 K st. ne., housewife; Richard T. Layton, 5521 Colorado ave. nw., Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. foreman.

Also Mrs. Catherine L. Owen, 1813 Hamlin st. ne., General Accounting Office auditor; Thomas Mutchler, sr., 615 Upshur st. nw., Washington Gas Light Co. supervisor; Mrs. Julia A. Ribnitzki, 1458 Columbia rd. nw., beautician; Joseph Scheiner, 510 Rittenhouse st. nw., photographer; George E. Sedgwick, 212 14th pl. ne., Alliance Plumbing Co. plumber, and William G. Younes, 4816 10th st. ne., H. L. Malin Co. accountant.

Committee members elected were Walter M. Bastian, Austin Canfield, John J. Carmody, Lowry N. Coe, Milton W. King, George F. McNeil and Godfrey L. Munter, all past presidents of the bar association.

The association, which met at the Mayflower Hotel, amended its by-laws to allow its Administrative Law section to appoint one director to serve on the association's board of directors.

Main speaker at last night's meeting was Harrison Tweed, president of the American Law Institute, and authority on wills.

Cornell Law Club Told About Coplon Spy Case

Aspects of the Coplon espionage case were discussed by Raymond Whearty, special assistant to the Attorney General, in a talk before members of the Cornell Law Club yesterday.

Whearty spoke at the club's monthly luncheon meeting in the New Center Restaurant, 1016 14th st. nw. O. P. Stevens presided.

'Unselfish Service Sword' Presented Round Table Head

Canatsey

Ira R. Canatsey of Denver, president of Round Table International, yesterday urged the Washington Loyal Knights of the Round Table to cooperate with other national service organizations in promoting citizenship responsibility.

Meeting with the local organization at the Washington Hotel, Canatsey presented Dr. Nelson M. Blake, president of the Washington table, "a sword of unselfish service."

Each local table of the international is limited to 128 members representing professions and businesses in the area.

Lamond Heights

A resume of last season's activities was presented by Joel Paul Sharon, president of the Lamond Heights Citizens Association, last night at its meeting at 6000 New Hampshire av. nw.

Sharon reported the District sewer division, at the behest of the association, was recommending installation of a sewer from Rittenhouse st. to Eastern ave ne. Sharon, a Department of Justice attorney, was elected president of the association last week.

The association adopted a resolution to ask Capital Transit Co. for further improvement in K-4 bus service during rush hours. The organization obtained improved service on the line some time ago, according to Sharon.

A gift was presented to the retiring president of the group, Howard F. Baxter, who is moving from the District.

Citizen Group Pays Honor to Mrs. Sartwell

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night presented a scroll of appreciation to Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell and made her a "perpetual" delegate to the Federation of Citizens Association.

Mrs. Sartwell, who had been president of the association for six years and is now public relations officer of the federation, also was made a perpetual representative of the association in civic affairs. She lives at 200 Rhode Island ave. ne.

The 24 members at the meeting in the Crosby Noyes School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne., asked the District Commissioners to seek a larger Federal contribution to the budget and for a traffic survey at 7th and Franklin sts. ne.

A representative of the Recreation Department presented the association and nine individual members certificates of merit for voluntary work at Edgewood Playground.

Thomas Circle

The Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night unanimously approved music in streetcars and buses.

In another resolution, the organization meeting at 1536 16th st. nw., asked that Central High School be kept as it is. It also asked that parades hereafter be confined to Constitution ave., after members complained that last Saturday's Shriners' parades snarled traffic on K st. nw.

The association voted to oppose the uprooting of trees to make new traffic lanes, and elected James H. Tobias and James A. Nagle, both of 1453 Rhode Island ave. nw., as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association.

American U. Baroque Music Fine

By Paul Hume

American University unveiled its newest musical venture last night in Clendenen Hall.

There the university's newly formed chamber music society gave an evening of Baroque music.

The program consisted of three works: sonatas by Corelli and Loeillet, and the Musical Offering by Bach. It was a unique evening because of the music and because of the excellence of its performance.

The term "baroque" refers to extremes of ornamentation and composers' fascination with exhaustive elaborations upon given themes.

Coorelli in Italy, Loeillet in Franch, and Bach in Germany were writing music deriving from this vitalizing spirit. Last night's sonatas by the French and Italian contemporaries were forerunner in style as they were in point of time to the music of the great Johann Sebastian Bach. The music of Bach represents the apex of Baroque writing.

George Steiner and Alan Martin were the violinists last night; George Wargo and John Martin played viola and cello; the winds were Wallace Mann, flute, Ray Still, oboe, Vernon Kirkpatrick, English horn, and Walter Maciejewicz, bassoon.

Emerson Meyers, director of the new group, played the harpsichord parts throughout the program. The music was set forth with remarkable fidelity of style, purity of tone and rare textural beauty.

Whitehurst Freeway Traffic Marred by Only One Tie-Up

A temporary traffic tie-up at Washington Circle at rush hour last night marred otherwise marked improvement in the second day's flow of traffic in the vicinity of the new Whitehurst Freeway.

The snarl, lasting about 15 minutes, backed up Virginia-bound cars from the circle on K st. and Pennsylvania ave. to 26th st. nw., according to traffic officials on the scene. The tie-up began shortly after 5:30 p. m.

Traffic Director Keneipp said some 1400 cars used the elevated roadway between 7:30 and 8:30 a. m. yesterday" "about the volume we expected."

Expressing surprise at how quickly motorists have caught on to the new approaches to the freeway, Keneipp said yesterday morning's operation "was a great improvement" over Monday's experience.

He attributed the improvement to: (1) better understanding by drivers on how to get on and off the freeway (2) fewer sightseers detouring from their normal routes to have a look at the new roadway, and (3) greater use of the new loop road under the Pennsylvania ave. bridge.

In an effort to further ease congestion at Washington Circle, Keneipp said last night that he would immediately readjust the light at 24th st. and K st. to permit eastbound K st. traffic (mostly from the freeway) to enter the circle ahead of the Pennsylvania ave. flow. He said he could accomplish this by holding Pennsylvania ave. traffic 20 seconds longer than K st. motorists.

Kilgore's Son Put Under Observation

New York, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Robert M. Kilgore, 25, son of the United States Senator from West Virginia, was held for psychiatric examination at Kings County Hospital today after he fought policemen who entered his apartment last night.

Police, summoned by Kilgore's wife, Shirley, 23, said Kilgore struck at them, then tried to reach a closet in which they later found three war souvenir guns. He was charged with attempted felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan law, which forbids possession of guns without a permit.

His father, Democratic Senator Harley M. Kilgore, said in Washington today that his son had returned from Army service in the South Pacific in a "highly nervous condition" and that he had suffered two breakdowns in recent months.

His condition had prevented him from resuming studies at the Columbia University Law School this fall, and his wife had made arrangements with a psychiatrist for him to enter a hospital for full-time treatment within the next week.

Mrs. Kilgore, the former Shirley Schubert of Halstad, Minn., was charged with abetting her husband in concealing unregistered weapons but the charges against her were dropped.

Married only two years, she had been caring for her husband at their Brooklyn apartment. Last night Kilgore's condition became worse and, because of his great physical strength, she called a neighbor to help. She also telephoned the psychiatrist and the police.

Kilgore, a husky, handsome man, met Miss Schubert when she was attending high school in Washington and Kilgore was at George Washington University. Their romance was interrupted by the war, when Kilgore enlisted as a private, served as a lieutenant with the Philippine Scouts, and was discharged in 1946 with the rank of captain.

Senator Kilgore said today that his son showed signs of nervous fatigue at that time, but his condition improved. Young Kilgore and Miss Schubert were married in Minneapolis in 1948, and moved to New York, where he took up law study and worked as a clerk in a law office.

government, and added "I don't like the idea of circumventing the work of the committee."

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), member of both the Rules and District Committees, said there was no intention to bypass the District group.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) of the Rules Committee teamed with Smith in urging approval of the crime study. "This does not take away from the District Committee any of the rights it has," he said. "It only gives the added power to subpena documents and compel the attendance of witnesses."

"It was the feeling of the Rules Committee that the District Committee should have subpena powers," said Brown. "There are times when those who are engaged in criminal activities are unwilling to volunteer testimony."

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), member of the District Committee, joined Bates in declaring that the resolution should have been considered in advance by the District group.

Miller added a strong indorsement of the work of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police. "I think the House can be proud that we have one of the finest law enforcement agencies under Major Barrett of any city in the country," said Miller.

Youths Sought In Robbery

Maryland State and county police yesterday were trying to find five teen-aged youths who beat and robbed a 24-year-old assistant Duke University publicity director early Sunday on the University of Maryland campus.

The beaten man, Whiteford Smith, of Charlotte, N. C., was in Emergency Hospital recovering from a fractured jaw. Police said he told them he was beaten at about 12:20 a. m. Sunday while walking across the Maryland campus after a visit to a fraternity house there. Smith had come to this area to attend the Navy-Duke football game, played in Annapolis Saturday.

Missing Film Player Had New Romance

Los Angeles, Oct. 11 (AP).—The missing brunette film extra, Jean Elizabeth Spangler, had "a new romance" with an unidentified man, actor Robert Cummings disclosed today.

Cummings said the 27-year-old beauty told him about her heart interest last Wednesday. Miss Spangler disappeared Friday night leaving a cold trail.

"I was sitting on my dressing room steps on the set when Jean walked by whistling," Cummings said. "I said, 'You sound happy.' She replied, 'I am, I have a new romance.'

"I asked her 'Is it serious?' and she said, 'Not exactly, but I'm having the time of my life.'"

Detectives said that since she left her apartment at 5:30 p. m. Friday they have found only one tangible clew.

That is her torn purse, the handles ripped off. It was found Sunday adjacent to Fern Hill Canyon in Griffith Park, miles from the home of the divorcee.

Investigators said they had little to work on in a parallel with unsolved sex killings such as that of Elizabeth Short, known as the "Black Dahlia," in January, 1947. There were some thin comparisons with the case of Miss Spangler and others.

After the nude, bisected body of Miss Short was found, someone mailed her purse to the police. In the disappearance case of Mrs. Mimi Boomhower, Bel-Air widow, her purse was found at a market with a scrawled note "Found this on beach." There has been no trace of Mrs. Boomhower since she dropped from sight last August.

A note in Miss Spangler's purse gave no immediate help to investigators. It read: "Kirk—can't wait any longer. Going to see Dr.——. Will work best this way while mother is away."

Detectives said relatives, friends and Miss Spangler's attorney could shed no light on identity of "Kirk" or the doctor.

D. C. Firemen Emphasize Prevention

National Fire Prevention Week opened yesterday with a parade of District smoke-eaters and fire-fighting equipment down Pennsylvania ave.

Eight pieces of apparatus—the newest, a 1949 engine, and the oldest a 1931 water tower—drove along the parade route, displaying greatly enlarged photographs of fire disasters.

Assistant Chief Instructor Lieut. Charles C. Wolz of the District of Columbia Fire Department described each piece of apparatus as it passed Post Square, and identified each of the eight marching battalions and six chief's cars. Music was furnished by bands from Anacostia High School and the Metropolitan Police Department.

All fire houses will be open for public inspection during Fire Prevention Week. The D. C. Fire Prevention Council of the Washington Board of Trade is coordinating the week's activities.

People's Counsel

If there is any reason for the position of people's counsel in utility rate hearings, it is to represent the consuming public in the same manner as the utilities themselves are represented before the Public Utilities Commission. This potentially important function received short shrift, however, in the hearings concluded yesterday on the petition of the Washington Gas Light Co. for a rate increase. Acting PUC Chairman Lauderdale refused summarily to grant the request of People's Counsel O'Dea for a two-day extension to allow further study of a company exhibit introduced only Monday.

This refusal, and Mr. Lauderdale's accompanying comment that he did not know why Mr. O'Dea should quarrel with the company exhibits, seem to us tactless and high-handed, to say the least. It is highly probable that further study by Mr. O'Dea would not affect the outcome of the PUC decision. But the hearings have gone on since July, and it is hard to see how a mere two-day extension would have inconvenienced the PUC.

The sad part of the affair is the impossibility of Mr. O'Dea's position. He stated, for example, that he had not even had time to read the transcript of the company's new rate schedule exhibit before Mr. Lauderdale overruled him. Some 56 exhibits were introduced during the course of the hearings, and many of them were extremely technical. Mr. O'Dea has had no assistance in analyzing these reports, and if he has shown something less than dynamism in presenting the public's case, it must be recognized that he has been working under a severe handicap. If there is to be an advocate of the public interest distinct from the utilities tribunal itself, then there ought to be funds to provide the statistical staff necessary to do a thorough job—and this is a matter for the District Commissioners and Congress to implement. Mr. O'Dea probably would be the first to agree that the post of people's counsel, as presently constituted, is a sham.

Not A Job For Congress

Senator McCarthy's suggestion that Congress relieve itself of the burden of passing on the vast number of special claims that come before it in the form of private bills ought to meet with warm response from overworked legislators as well as long-suffering citizens who are denied justice by the present method. The inescapable fact is that Congress has no time to consider bills of this kind. Consequently, many claims that have little or no merit slip through because of the energy that some legislator puts behind them. More frequently valid claims against the Government for injuries or damages to property are pushed aside year after year by more important measures. In other words, the present method of handling claims is a hit-or-miss affair that is terribly wasteful and unjust.

Congress made some improvement, to be sure, in the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. In the Seventy-ninth Congress 55 percent of all bills passed were private; in the Eightieth Congress the percentage of private bills dropped to 34. But Congress left so many loopholes in its reorganization act that it is still bedeviled by a flood of private claims and private immigration and deportation bills which it cannot possibly handle. In the Schiek case that precipitated the debate in the Senate the other day, Senator Fulbright frankly admitted that the Judiciary Committee has to dispose of such cases, not on their merits, but by rule of thumb.

The La Follette-Monroney Committee pointed out three years ago that Congress is simply not equipped to serve as a fact-finding body in intricate claims cases. More recently an excellent article on the subject by Dr. George B. Galloway of the Legislative Reference Service shows that it costs almost $200 for Congress to pass a single private bill, more in some instances than the amount of relief granted. No patch-work, in our opinion, will enable Congress to perform this function economically, efficiently or justly. The only solution is to have the claims adjudicated outside of Congress with the understanding that Congress will then appropriate the funds needed to pay the awards.

Dr. Galloway suggests that the exceptions in the Federal Tort Claims Act of 1946 be eliminated. The result would be to have all claims for less than $1000 settled in the departments in which they arise and all claims for more than that amount passed upon by the Federal district courts. Immigration and deportation cases that now go to Congress could be kept within the Department of Justice, with provision for their adjustment by the Board of Immigration Appeals. The duty of Congress is to legislate, not to adjudicate individual cases. With the present pressure upon Congress to decide momentous international issues as well as to act as a board of directors for our vast and sprawling Government, it is almost criminal for it to continue afflicting itself with what are really administrative and judicial functions.

Unification's Core

Defense Secretary Johnson is right in asserting that the Navy-Air Force row could, under some circumstances, do grave damage to the national security. Undoubtedly there has been something like what Mr. Johnson calls "a campaign of terror" against unification by some Navy zealots, and a superficial observer of the Battle of the Pentagon could readily conclude that the Navy is more concerned with making war on the Air Force than with preparing for war on a potential enemy. But it is imperative to lay bare the Navy's festering grievances before any rational understanding can be achieved. The important thing is for the House Armed Services Committee to hear all sides and to give Mr. Johnson the opportunity he has requested to rebut some of the Navy's extravagant claims.

There is some indication that Mr. Johnson is being made a scapegoat because he has not granted the Navy all it wanted. It would be a grave miscarriage of purpose if the House hearings were to be turned in the direction of giving the Navy or any other service unrestricted control over its budget. If there is any one central core of unification, it is an integrated military budget. Individual service lobbying for funds caused Secretary Forrestal some of his gravest worries. Secretary Johnson properly has won applause for insisting on one budget.

The need for economy is real, and no doubt the budget has not been pared to anything near what would be possible if military tasks were approached on a functional rather than a separate service basis. That this is not now the case is shown by the virtually even division of the 1950 budget quoted by General Bradley—34 percent for the Air Force, 33.6 percent for the Army and 32.4 percent for the Navy. But realistic economies must be related to objectives, and it is here that Secretary Johnson sometimes has seemed more concerned with appearances than with the substance of what he has done. And an arbitrary refusal to consider all factors serves unification no better than does complete service autonomy.

However praiseworthy the intent, some of Mr. Johnson's methods have been pretty crude. Former Navy Secretary Sullivan asserted, for example, that Mr. Johnson promised him a hearing before canceling the supercarrier. The fact that Mr. Sullivan was not consulted gave the Navy a grievance which it has played to a fare-thee-well. Mr. Johnson could save himself a great deal of further trouble if he would insure that the Navy is consulted before indiscriminate slashes are made in the current budget. If the "secret" order cutting aircraft carriers from 8 to 4 in the 1951 budget actually exists, as Representative Vinson charges, Mr. Johnson's repeated assurance that the Navy will not be reduced to a "second-class role" will not be very convincing.

Full consultation would not necessarily alter the final result; indeed, it might point the way to new economies. Certainly, if there is ever to be consideration on the basis of function, there can be no yielding to the dogmas of service autonomy or one-weapon invincibility. By the same token, however, integration means a composite of views, and that is obtainable only if each party is at least listened to. Mr. Johnson's position requires that he himself serve as a symbol of unification, and to do this he must obtain the confidence of the military establishment that he will act only after he knows all the facts.

French Change

In the present constitution of the political parties in France a successor to Henri Queuille requires a fairly comfortable majority in the National Assembly. The real opposition comes from the Communists and the Gaullists combined, and both are obstructionist, no matter what the issue involved. A majority over these two groups would be 310 votes, and Jules Moch, who has been asked to form a ministry, at last report could be sure of 317 votes, or the bulk of the membership of the center parties. However, there would be no point in facing the chamber with seven beyond a bare majority when there could never be any guaranty that the full complement would always be present. Both Gaullists and Communists are unsleeping, and this cannot be said for the center parties, which are riven by subsidiary dissensions, anyway.

Jules Moch is a Socialist deputy, and was Minister of the Interior in the Queuille government. He won his spurs last October when he restored order to the coal mines. John L. Lewis, it will be remembered, protested Moch's handling of the disorder, though what Moch did may have saved France and, consequently, the whole of the Atlantic community from something much worse than a strike. Moch is, indeed, a resolute man, with a determination not to allow a tiny minority of malcontents to ruin a basic industry, and so bring economic life in general to a standstill. He seems to have been the first minister to figure out that when 200 men tie up an industry employing tens of thousands, fewer than 300 policemen are sufficient to defeat their fell purpose. All France is in his debt. The coal strike last fall was the last effort on the part of the Communists to stage a holdup and frustrate the Marshall Plan.

Since then the French have made marked economic progress. To be sure, grumbling is never absent over the hold-the-line on wages and prices, but, in general, signs have not been wanting of the return of a national discipline. The devaluation in Britain was the shock that precipitated crisis. France had to follow suit, but, with government control less in France than in Britain—the French have been moving away from controls as the British have been tightening them—the reaction on the part of wage-earners and business was immediate. The reaction was expressed in an upward movement in prices and an agitation for wage increases.

The Queuille cabinet fell on the wage issue. The degree of wage adjustment in the public services is the problem that had to be solved as the condition precedent to center party agreement on a new ministry. Moch, for instance, has been angling for Paul Reynaud's 30 independent votes, but Reynaud, afraid of inflation, hitherto has not agreed to concessions. Yet, in the circumstances of the parliamentary make-up, Reynaud's group holds a power beyond its numerical strength, and a new Premier would risk an upset at the outset without at least its initial support. Presumably, with Moch confident of his ability to get a vote of confidence in the Assembly, there has been some sort of a Moch-Reynaud understanding. It is to be hoped so, for the center needs to be solid in these critical days, not only to keep inflation licked, but to pursue the Western policy, i. e., unity in Europe and understanding with Bonn, which made so much headway in French thinking and action under the sagacious Henri Queuille.

Proud To Be Unethical

In further demonstration of his superb talent for embarrassing the President, Maj. Gen. Harry H. (Fixit) Vaughan has once more delivered himself of a candid remark that made the headlines. "I'm considered in many circles to be very unethical, and I'm sure I will continue to be," the garrulous general said at a party given in his honor by the veterans' lobbies in Washington. "There are only two people I have to please —Mr. Truman and Mrs. Vaughan." The clear implication is that the President and Mrs. Vaughan are pleased with his unethical conduct. And at least so far as the President is concerned, that is an inescapable result of his failure to discipline or restrain the bumptious general after his indiscretions were disclosed in a congressional investigation.

It would be charitable to assume that General Vaughan was clowning. But there is no warrant for any such conclusion. On the contrary, he seemed to be candidly informing the veterans that the President has drawn a protective wall about his unethical "fixit" activities. Since he expects to continue the conduct that has been regarded as unethical, there is also a hint in his remarks that he will still welcome gifts of deep freeze units from interests that are seeking favors from the Government. And this is spoken openly with the implied blessing of the President.

There was a time when a man who wore the uniform of the United States Army and bore the title of major general and military aide to the President was regarded as a public servant. His official conduct was even supposed to be of some concern to the people who pay his salary. But that day, alas, has vanished. The military aide has become only a personal lackey to the President—a lackey who need not uphold the standards of the Army or concern his head with the ethics of public office. In other words, the standards of an important ceremonial office have been debased to fit the qualifications of an incumbent who happens to be a crony of the President. The effect is to lower the moral tone of the entire public service. It is possible to understand the sense of loyalty that induces the President to tolerate such a taint upon his Administration, but even he must blanch a little when his trusted aide comes so near to saying in public that unethical conduct on the part of his close assistants is of no concern to the President.

MENDING

I am become a Martha
Who was a Mary born.
Never a moment taken
From mending what is torn.

Mornings I say, "By nightfall
This mending will be done,"
But when the next sun rises
New mending is begun.

Anything old as I am
I very plainly see
Ravels out while you mend it,
Though handled carefully.

I am become a Martha
Who picks up every pin
Lest I should see too clearly
The shadows walking in.

Shadows that fell on Lazarus,
And made him shake with cold,
Shadows that fell on Jericho,
And toppled it of old.

Admitting DPs

Your correspondent of October 7, Frank W. Vedder, in urging that DPs be barred from entering this country has presented the mass indictment that their "deeply rooted hatreds and prejudices, intolerances, bigotries, and lack of flexibility, make them undesirable anywhere." His indictment is hardly proved by his own manifestation of just these characteristics.

He states that their reasons for not returning to their former homes "do not seem sound." What reason would be "sound"? One would imagine that the brutality of the last decade's political and racial persecution would afford a "sound" reason for persecutees to decide not to return.

The reasons for large foreign communities in our country are legion, but among them must also be considered the economic discrimination and exploitation that forces foreign peoples to huddle together for mutual protection; the callous attitude of the righteous "Americans" (themselves not many boatloads away from the immigrant incubation stage) who seek to contain these recent arrivals in certain occupations and housing areas—these adjuncts are not discussed by Mr. Vedder nor are they likely to be discussed reasonably or intelligently by those who seek to keep this America pristine-pure from "foreign defilation"—pure in their conception of what this democracy should conform to.

It is true that DP admission may have a temporary depressing effect on the economy but in the long run it will be the influx of different ideas and cultures that will be the salvation of our country. It is the only way to prevent our Nation from turning downward in its socio-economic status as every other society in history has done.

Nats' Manager

The baseball season has come to a close for the Washington Senators, as we all know. Washington fans (and, though it is hard to believe, there are quite a few) saw several good games. For example, the Cleveland-Nats game was well played, with the Senators fighting and the Senators winning. Also, the Boston-Nats game presented September 28 was said to be one of the finest games our team has ever played.

Now, Mr. Griffith is looking toward 1950. He has released Joe Kuhel, manager for the Nats for 1949. The big question is who is going to become manager for the 1950 season? Rumors have it that because "Griff" won't indulge in contracting a really good manager, he may use one of the boys on the team.

A scattered few of the Nats fans would so like to see the Senators place at least fifth if they can't "shine" in the first division. Could they with a playing manager? There is doubt. There are a few former managers, Steve O'Neill one, who still know their baseball and have managed winning teams, and, if asked nicely probably would manage the Nats. And Mr. Griffith might have a team he never dreamed he owned.

Crowded Schools

It is gratifying to note the publicity The Washington Post is giving to the possibility of securing immediate relief of the overcrowded classroom situation in the District schools by putting into use vacant school space and taking pupils to the buildings by bus.

The Northwest Council of Citizens Associations comprising 10 associations in the Northwest section of the city urged this course of action two years ago.

The need is for prompt action—now. Long-range planning for ultimate permanent arrangements must continue, but this offers a means of alleviating the double-shift and over-crowded classes right now. The Northwest Council applauds The Post's interest and sensible approach.

"Airline Bonanza"

In your editorial of Saturday, September 24, entitled "Airline Bonanza," you gave the airlines well-deserved praise for their efforts to lower the cost of air travel as much as possible while still maintaining the highest safety standards.

However, in enumerating by name some of the airlines offering various types of low-cost service, you failed to mention National Airlines, which pioneered low-cost, north-south, air service for Washington and the Eastern Seaboard. As a matter of fact, National Airlines obtained Civil Aeronautics Board approval for low rates despite the vigorous initial opposition of some of the other airlines you mentioned.

Last spring, National Airlines was the first to announce low summer excursion fares. But it had been forced to fight for two years to get approval of those fares. These excursion fares remain in effect until November 1, when National will begin offering 4-cents-a-mile "air coach" rates between New York, Washington, Jacksonville and Miami.

Again, in the case of the north-south air coach service, National Airlines pioneered. Until very recently, its proposals to bring this low-cost service to the traveling public were opposed by competing lines. National Airlines also was the first to request the "family-fare plan" in the area it serves, thus permitting father or mother to take along the rest of the family at half-price.

District Manager, National Airlines.

Navajo-Hopi "Assimilation"

The issue involved in the Navajo-Hopi Indian rehabilitation bill goes far deeper than "wardship" and assimilation." The issue is nothing less than the right of self-determination. The right of the Indians to self-government and to cultural, religious, and economic freedom has been fully recognized by the Supreme Court of the United States for over a century. It has declared that our Indian peoples are "dependent sovereign peoples," which means, in plain English, that Congress and the Executive have very limited power to interfere with Indian self-determination in their own internal affairs.

Because of this quasi-sovereignty, our historic relations with our Indian peoples have been conducted, until very recent times, through treaties, which themselves are a recognition of sovereignty. And in 1934, the Congress, in the Indian Reorganization Act, formally reaffirmed the inherent rights of the Indians to local self-government and to cultural, religious, and economic freedom, and made this affirmation effective by permitting the tribes to adopt tribal constitutions and tribal incorporation for economic enterprise and by providing such sinews as the Indian credit fund, the land purchase fund, and technical education for Indians.

The Indian Reorganization Act is an affirmation of the Constitution. Section 9 of the Navajo-Hopi bill is a denial of it. For how can the Indian peoples have self-government and self-determination if State law supersedes tribal law?

Mary Spargo, in her thoughtful article in your issue of October 9, quotes Representatives Murdock and Morris — both members of the conference committee that approved Section 9—as saying that the issue is "assimilation" and "full citizenship" versus Indian "wardship" and keeping the Indians "as separate and distinct from all other persons in the country."

Our Indian peoples are, and always have been, good assimilators. With self-government, they know how to incorporate change into their lives without disruption. Under the Reorganization Act, they are rapidly passing out of wardship into partnership; they are already full citizens, as recognized by Congress in 1924, and they are something more than full citizens, as recognized by the court doctrine of dependent sovereignty.

The kind of "assimilation" the assimilators want would rapidly reduce the Indians to the status of rural paupers, below the Okies, below the migratory workers. This is not a matter of opinion but of fact. In many parts of the United States there are Indian groups who, through legal technicalities, have mercifully escaped the Federal "wardship" the assimilators deplore, and almost without exception these groups are pariahs and untouchables.

In one Western State, one of these groups—until the Indian Service intervened—got its living by patrolling the garbage cans of the nearby town. "Wardship" has come to mean, in recent years, merely that the Federal Government is providing competent advisory services, combined with such aids as credit, education, and medical care, to help the Indians back on their feet after they had been steam-rollered almost into oblivion. Shall these gains be lost through the sterile, un-American doctrine of assimilation?

The ancient Hopi culture is a unique and powerful instrument of personal, social, artistic, and spiritual integration. The ancient Navajo culture is the purest form of democracy, tolerating no form of authority or aggression. They are the product of thousands of years of evolution, of myriad generations of men striving to be whole and significant. On what have our assimilators fed that they wish to crush out these patiently and painfully wrought out values and beauties and turn their bearers into the image of Babbitt and Main Street, 1949 edition?

Atomic Peace Campaign

By Malvina Lindsay

Mars At The Wheel

A HAUNTING question, seldom spoken, lies in the mind of many an American, I believe, whenever he reads, hears or talks about the explosion of the Soviet atom bomb. His nagging baffiment might be expressed something like this:

"Why do I hear nothing but word of arms races and of 'war is not inevitable, but—' talk? Have we given up completely on stopping the next war? If so, why aren't we decentralizing cities, digging caves, regimenting civilians, including women and children, into defense units? Or, if there's still a chance for peace, why aren't we doing something positive about it?

"Oh, yes, I know you'll tell me that the way to keep peace is to be stronger than those who challenge it. I'm not objecting to our defense program, as we call it. But even if there's no other answer than an arms race, isn't this bellicose and fatalistic talk by some of our leaders, generals, and other 'realists,' as they call themselves, rather stupid? Doesn't it just egg on the other fellow, make him more cussed to deal with, strengthen his support at home?

"At least I'm assuming that most of us, excepting a few paranoiac jingoists, want to hold war at bay as long as possible. If so, why are we fanning its flames with our talk and thought?

"ALSO, IF thought and emotion have the great physical impact in the world that doctors and even natural scientists are admitting, then why aren't we being just as up-to-date in our use of them as we are in that of atomic energy? And I want to know why, if we can spend billions for weapons, can't we spend more for positive measures for peace? Why do we haggle over money to make the Marshall Plan truly effective and for appropriations to the few international agencies that are trying to tame mankind and bring nations together and then shell it out in a big way for anything that smacks of destruction?

"Oh, yes, I know those things cost the taxpayer money and are only a long gamble on peace. But isn't an arms race also a gamble? And what value would our stocks, bonds, houses, bank deposits have in an atomic war?

"Anyway, if we don't work out something on the positive side, where's this thing going to end? Why do we have all this talk about keeping the atom bomb lead when germ warfare's even worse? And what about cosmic rays that the Russians are rumored to be doing so much with?

"Yes, I know people seem to evaporate into vague optimism when you ask what can be done concretely about peace. It's true you can't blueprint a program for it the same as you can for a B-36 or a supercarrier.

"But just the same I keep wondering why we don't at least try to do more. After all, we do have the United Nations, weak as it may be. Wouldn't you think this would be the time of all times for this country to put more interest, faith, even money into the only hope of international action the world has?

"AND WHAT about some really big, bold, long-range investments abroad to strengthen friendly nations, and our own markets? What about more congressional investment, and more public support and interest in diplomatic agencies of the Nation? What about more emphasis on the State Department and less on the Pentagon? What about more temperance in public statements by our officials and leaders so that the rest of the world won't regard us as a big bully? Why, in fact, don't all of us quit strengthening negative forces with our thinking and jabbering?

"What about catching up with science and giving more attention to the psychological situation involving matters of face saving between nations? Why not take up the offers of leading world psychiatrists and other social scientists to contribute service along that line? Why not some big-scale research into that as well as into atoms and germs?

"Why not turn more energy and thought to these matters? Why not be willing to spend to the limit now of our time, interest, money in a peace gamble that might save us the loss of everything we have?

"The whole thing is that many of us don't feel right inside the way things are going. We're willing to concede that from our viewpoint at least our Nation's tried hard for cooperation with the Soviet and gotten nowhere. But is that any reason for surrendering completely to atomic war fatalism? Surely there's still something we can do besides making bigger and better machines to kill with!"

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

British Royalty Buys Its Way

THE IMMEDIATE results of the devaluation of the British pound and the currencies of the rest of Europe can be seen in the department store advertisements. They announce price reductions on china, gloves, woolens — the specialties that Britain and Europe want to send into this country in order to earn more dollars.

Childs

But those specialties are also made in this country. The manufacturers of woolens and china have powerful lobbyists in Washington. Some of those lobbyists are right in the Congress itself.

The new competition in price may well bring a stiffening of the opposition to European aid which subsidizes the European producer so than he can compete in the American market. It is easy—too easy—to assume that Russia's atomic explosion has swept away all this opposition and that now members of Congress will unhesitatingly stand up and do their duty in the face of the threat to civilization.

Self-interest is not so readily set aside even in the face of the dictates of overwhelming logic. And the same thing is true of prejudice. A remarkable number of letters have come to me commenting on the statement in this space that whatever the British paid to maintain their royal family it was of no business of ours.

Incidentally, in that other column I did not give the whole picture on the cost of British royalty. While it is true that the government in London appropriates for the royal household and various members of the royal family $2,188,000, this is made up for many times over in revenue from the royal estates.

THE House of Windsor has great inherited wealth, much of it put together by shrewd, canny Queen Victoria. Under an agreement between the government and the present King all of that revenue goes into the British treasury.

This includes the income returned by the Duchy of Cornwall, which usually goes to the Prince of Wales. As there is today no Prince of Wales, this is "vested in the monarch." In the fiscal year 1947-8 the government got from the crown nearly four million dollars more than the amount appropriated for royalty.

These facts probably will not alter the opinion of some of my more vociferous correspondents. The following is typical:

"I think it is very much our business inasmuch as we are asked to pay a very large part of the amount spent by royalty in addition to the billions we are giving them. If that is not any of our business, then nothing they do is our business."

That happens, of course, to be incorrect. American dollars do not go to pay internal costs of the British government. They go primarily to pay for the importation into England of food and raw materials essential to maintain British production and to keep British workers and their families alive and healthy. I suppose that if the members of the British royal family ever found themselves out of jobs, they could retire to one or the other of the farms they own and live more comfortably than most of their countrymen.

ONE CORRESPONDENT, who took pains to point out his Irish name, expressed indignation that any American should presume to question the cost of Britain's royal family. Assailing this "pawnbrokering" attitude, he said:

"What about the cost of all the phony kings and queens we support? The Veiled Prophet queen in St. Louis, the Mardi Gras queen in New Orleans and whatever the name of that queen is they elect out in Omaha; The Prune queen, Diaper Week queen and so on? If the British fired the royal family, we'd hire 'em a new one so our top brass snobs could have them to be introduced to at court levies."

In many Americans, even though we don't admit it, there is a sneaking admiration, perhaps even envy, for the pomp and circumstance of the days when Britain's royal family rides in splendor through London's streets. As one Britisher wryly pointed out, the number of American tourists gathered every day around the gates of Buckingham Palace in the tourist season should persuade the film companies to provide a subsidy for royalty.

In a time of swift and kaleidoscopic change, the ancient symbols, even though they may have lost much of their old meaning, give a sense of continuity and of the vitality of traditional values. But self-interest in a highly competitive world is something else again. The American manufacturer who feels that the taxes he pays are going to subsidize the success of a competitor is likely to do all he can to see that that subsidy is stopped.

Clarification of Lobbying Act Called Committee's First Job

(Fourth Article in Series)

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Any consideration of lobbies and lobbyists inevitably brings one to the conclusion that Congress failed to do a workmanlike job in drafting its first law attempting to regulate them.

It is rather interesting to note that although Congress had talked about the question on and off for 40 years, when it finally got around to acting it did so hastily, with only two or three Senate hearings, and came up with a law full of ambiguous and almost irreconcilable terms.

Prime purpose of the House lobby investigation to be conducted by Representative Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.), therefore, is the formation of new legislation directed at clarification of the law.

Has $50,000 Appropriation

Buchanan's investigation will start off with a $50,000 appropriation and will probably last from three to six months. It will probably open the middle of next month. The whole subject of lobbies will get a far more comprehensive study than it did when the first law was passed in 1946.

Buchanan has pledged himself to a completely fair, unbiased inquiry, and obviously starts off with no prejudice against lobbies or lobbying, provided lobbyists, and their revenue and expenditures, are in the open.

Last week an unusually able special committee was named to the lobby inquiry. Besides Buchanan, members are Representatives Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.), Carl Albert (D., Okla.), Clyde Doyle (D., Calif.), Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.), Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), and Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.).

The Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act is a part of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 and is found in Sections 301 to 311 of the law, inclusive.

Act Under Attack

Virtually every section of the act has been under attack, particularly by the National Association of Manufacturers in a suit against the Justice Department filed in January, 1948.

Briefly, the purpose of the law is to require that all persons and groups engaged in lobbying identify themselves, disclose the sources of their income and the nature of their expenditures.

Although the NAM attacked the constitutionality of the law, as interfering with the First Amendment to the Constitution guaranteeing the right to petition Congress, this ground is not taken seriously in most quarters.

The Department of Justice, which is required to enforce the law, has taken the position that there is no serious question of the constitutionality of the act since it merely requires the registration of lobbyists. The act, the department points out, does not attempt to destroy or circumscribe the individual's right to lobby in any manner or to any extent he may see fit.

No Methods Illegitimate

In this connection, it is well to note that under this law there are no "illegitimate" methods of lobbying. The only legal violation lies in failure to register.

From time to time Washington has rocked with scandal—as when does it not?—over tales of the lavish parties given by this or that lobby to Congressmen, who have a very human interest in good food, good liquor and gay times. Whatever scandal may say about such parties, however, they do not violate the Lobbying Act, provided the givers are registered and account for their expenditures.

There are other rumored yarns of lobbying methods which verge on accusations of direct bribery. Even if the stories were found to be true, giver or recipient would not be in violation of the Lobbying Act, although each might run afoul of other statutes such as the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

Section 307 of the act defines the application of the title and includes any person (defined as an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, and any organization or group of persons) who by himself, or through any agent or employee or other persons in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly, solicits, collects, or receives money or any other thing of value to be used principally to aid, or the principal purpose of which person is to aid, in the accomplishment of any of the following purposes: (a) the passage or defeat or any legislation by the Congress of the United States; (b) To influence, directly or indirectly, the passage or defeat of any legislation by the Congress of the United States."

That word "principally" is one of the stickers in the law. There are few organizations even already registered who want to say that their principal purpose is lobbying.

(Additional provisions of the Lobby-Registration Act will be discussed tomorrow.)

Conviction of Theater In Lottery Is Upheld

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today upheld the conviction of the Greater Huntington Theater Corp. on lottery charges growing out of its operation of "give-away days."

A $1000 fine was imposed on the corporation in Cabell County Common Pleas Court after the conviction. The company argued its "give-away days" in no way violated State lottery statutes. It contended there is no requirement that a person buy a ticket to a theater to participate in such a plan.

Lobby Probers to Ask Advice From Other Congressmen

All members of the House and Senate will be asked to give suggestions to the New Select Committee of the House on Lobbying Activities, it was decided yesterday at the first organization meeting of the group.

The committee, headed by Representative Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) agreed upon a tentative budget request for $40,000. The House Committee on Administration is expected to meet Thursday to consider the request.

The time necessary for preliminary research "will run the time scheduled for hearings into January, 1950," the committee stated.

The committee announcement also stated that "there has been no agreement on objectives or policy."

Policy decisions will be formulated at later meetings of the committee, Chairman Buchanan announced.

The whole field of lobbying is so vast, committee members said, that careful research and study are necessary before the line the investigation is to follow can be determined.

Beside Buchanan, those who attended the meeting were: Representatives Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.), Clyde Doyle (D., Calif.), Clarence Brown (R., Ohio, and Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.). The other members, Representatives Carl Albert (D., Okla.), and Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) are out of town.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

This Is Not Progressive

IF IT IS to succeed at all, President Truman's welfare state will first of all demand exceedingly sober, clear-headed and practical political leadership. Without some self-discipline, the Government cannot safely venture into almost every sphere of the national life. In this absolutely fundamental respect, the story of the agriculture bill is far from reassuring.

This enormous measure has not attracted very impassioned attention, except among the farmers themselves. Yet it will cost the Nation a number of hundreds of millions or even billions of dollars that even its sponsors have not tried to estimate. It is exactly the kind of measure by which an increasingly planned national economy will stand or fall and to all intents, it has "growed" just as haphazardly as Topsy.

There was nothing haphazard, to be sure, about the original bill proposed by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. Despite the hysterical attacks upon it, there was really a great deal to be said for the Brannan bill. It accepted the inevitability of subsidizing American agriculture, which has now become habitual with both political parties. At the same time, it provided for the consumers consuming the surpluses, which is surely preferable to burning them or stuffing them away in cellars. And it faced up to the central fact that no economic activity can be indefinitely subsidized by the state without state control.

AFTER ALL, if anyone going into the oyster shell industry was to be guaranteed an annual profit of $10,000, three quarters of the country would shortly be engaged in oyster shell production, if production quotas were not fixed. This is the kind of truth that is not always apparent, however, to farm organizations. Except for the left-wing Farmers Union, Brannan was therefore not supported by any of the powers of the farm lobby; and the potent Farm Bureau Federation actually led the envenomed attack upon him.

Since Brannan had also made the remarkably foolish mistake of failing to consult any of the congressional farm leaders, the Brannan bill was shortly sunk without trace. After considerable comedy, the House passed the Gore bill, guaranteeing the farmers a flat 90 percent of the mythical parity, which simply meant promising particularly large and entirely rigid farm subsidies. The Gore bill made no mention of controls. Thus the farmers were to be stimulated to overproduce by high, rigidly guaranteed prices, with no further restrictions than the controls of the old 1938 farm law.

In the Senate, Secretary Brannan's predecessor, Senator Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, then offered still another bill, providing for subsidies on a sliding scale from 75 to 90 percent of parity, according to the conditions of farm production and of the economy. Again, no further production controls were included. Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas nonetheless got behind the Anderson bill, together with the Administration's other congressional chieftains. The Anderson bill looked like a moderate compromise, and all seemed to be in order—until the key vote on the amendment by Senator Russell of Georgia, restoring the 80 percent parity provision of the House bill.

THIS VOTE was even, 37 to 37, which would have killed the amendment. But the amendment was dramatically saved, when Vice President Barkley cast his ballot for Senator Russell. The immediate results were decidedly bad relations between Senator Lucas and the Vice President, plus a determined effort by the Administration leaders to get the Russell amendment stricken out again.

Senator Lucas, presumably acting for President Truman, actively dragooned the faithful into line. Senator Anderson made one or two concessions in his bill, to win a vote here or there. The word "shorn" was removed, for example, from the clauses governing subsidy payments on wool. This meant that the packing houses would get such subsidies on the wool that had not been shorn from sheep and lambs sent in for slaughter, and the gift of six million dollars to seven million dollars to the packers won a couple of votes.

By such means, Lucas and Anderson carried the day against the Russell amendment. Then, at this precise moment, President Truman chose to indicate that his own Senate leader had been wrong all the time, and that he, too, preferred flat 90 percent parity payments instead of the Anderson sliding scale. No explanation of why the unfortunate Lucas had been permitted to fight for the opposite policy was even hinted at. Nor was such an explanation needed. It was quite clear that the President had rather belatedly decided which scheme was the best politics, and had torpedoed his majority leader in order to do what was politically expedient.

The situation has been so rolled up that any prediction of the outcome has become foolish. One point has already become very clear, however. If the great decisions of the welfare state are to be taken in this hugger-mugger, politics-and-propaganda-ridden manner, the welfare state will run into trouble before it is even established.

Why twice?

Once Will Suffice

Thousands of cost-conscious executives and professional men have realized that writing dictation in a note book and then writing it again on the typewriter is a sheer waste of time and money.

By gaining all the time your secretary now devotes to "taking dictation" . . . instead of spending a third of her time at your desk, notebook in hand, she would save hours in which to give you constructive, far more valuable assistance . . . junior executive assistance . . . if you would only make it possible.

And you can make it possible . . . quickly, easily, and economically . . . by adopting Audograph Soundwriting, the wonderful new means of gaining, for both of you, extra time in which to really get things done.

And in addition, the Gray Audograph will record your important telephone conversations, meetings, conferences, and inventories on unbreakable, easy-to-file, mailable plastic discs that cost only a few pennies — yet record for over 60 minutes! The smallest, lightest and the most rugged of all dictation instruments, you can easily take it home or on trains, planes, and in your car . . . it will work for you anywhere.

Business Outlook

More Efficient Plant Layouts Declared Vital British Need

By J. A. Livingston

COVENTRY, England, Oct. 11.—Maybe a physician, making intrigate tests of the heart, lung expansion, and various other physiological responses could detect an essential difference between a British workman and an American workman, maybe he'd be able to say whether diet and inclination lead to a lower performance in Coventry, Birmingham, and Oxford than in Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia and other metal-working cities in the United States. I can't.

Livingston

I've completed tours of the Pressed Steel Co. of Oxford, which was started by the Budd Co. of Philadelphia and which uses American machines and methods; Motor Panels, Ltd., of Coventry, Rubery-Owen & Co., Ltd. of Darlaston, and the Austin Motor Works of Birmingham. Pressed Steel, Motor Panels, and Rubery-Owen, make auto bodies among other things. Austin is Britain's largest auto manufacturers, does about 25 percent of the business. I reached this conclusion: in England, as in America, the machines work the men, and not as we commonly think, vice versa.

But the British plants are not laid out to get the most out of their machines, hence out of their men. Individually, the workers carry on at a great pace. I saw men and women moving their hands almost as fast as the eye could follow. But that was not so consistently true as in comparable American plants.

AS JAMES M. PHILLIPS, managing director of Motor Panels, Inc., put it, "in America, everything possible is done to service the operator of a machine, to keep him on production. There are no distractions." Thus, the American production line is set up so that conveyor belts, or cranes, or mechanical grabs bring him material and take away the finished and semifinished product. The operator, all the time, is feeding metal into a machine. Result: The machine works full tilt, ditto the operator, ditto the whole plant. Phillips recently visited the United States, under the auspices of the Economic Cooperative Administration, to see how things are done.

On my rounds, I watched a British worker insert a square piece of metal into a machine to cut off the corners. It took four operations. In America, that would be done in a single swipe. In another case, I saw semifinished parts taken off a machine, loaded onto a dolly, moved, then unloaded at another place for welding to another piece of metal. In the United States, all of that loading and unloading would have been avoided. The operation, so far as possible, would have been conducted in a straight line—from machine to machine and worker to worker. In still another instance, a British worker used a rotary cutter to remove excess metal after another scribed the proper outline. In the United States, again, a single cutting machine would have done the job.

FREQUENTLY, British operators will feed metal into a machine and take out the finished part. That slows up the pace. The machine doesn't function while the worker is removing the metal—it's slowed up. In America, while one man removes the fabricated metal, the operator would be slipping in a fresh piece.

For the difference in method and tempo, the British have a standard explanation: The United States has mass production in its true sense. Chevrolet, for example, will make nearly two million cars a year; Austin, however, will do well to turn out 150,000. As a result, American companies can spend millions on tooling up and write off the capital investment quickly. For instance, a one-million-dollar tooling up expenditure means only 50 cents a car to Chevrolet. A $300,000 tooling cost would mean $2 per car for Austin.

Therefore, British companies often resort to hand labor, rather than introduce conveyor systems or make special dies or castings for operations requiring only batch production. Motor Panels, for instance, makes bodies for six different cars—the Daimler, Alvis, Jaguaes, Armstrong-Siddeley, Triumph and Vanguard. The average run fo rany one aor is 50 a week. In the United States, one of the independent companies, like Studebaker, Nash or Hudson, would require at peak production periods that many cars per day.

United States plants are laid out for maximum mobility. Machines can be moved about onto an assembly line according to need. The machines are taken to the work. In Britain, however, work often has to be taken to the machines.

Some improvement in British methods undoubtedly will result from time and motion studies, from rearranging plants, from the study of United States methods now going on. But essentially, until Britain goes in for the same kind of tooling up as America, until production runs justify the expense, the reliance will continue to be more on manpower and less on machine power, with a consequent lower tempo per man and machine.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—Trading today was on the cautious side, with grains showing firmness at times. Most of the traders had an ear cocked toward Washington, with some marking time until the Government crop estimate became available after the close of trading.

The news from Washington was not conclusive, and indicated continued disagreement over price-support levels.

At the close wheat was ¼ to 1¼ higher, corn was ¼ higher to ¼ lower, oats were unchanged to ⅝ higher, rye was ⅛ to 1 cent higher, soybeans were ¼ to 1½ higher and lard was unchanged to 8 cents a hundredweight higher.

Early in the session traders heard that the Army had purchased some flour and that the Commodity Credit Corp. had taken around a half million bushels of wheat Monday. That brought some buying into wheat after a sluggish start.

Ratification of ITO Charter Assailed as Threat to Trade

Boston, Oct. 11 (Spl.).—The Havana charter of the International Trade Organization (ITO) is a "surrender to economic nationalism" and perpetuates restrictive devices which throttle world trade, according to Philip Courtney, president of the Coty Co.

Courtney, an internationalist-minded businessman, pleaded today with his audience at the 21st Annual Boston Conference on Distribution to campaign against congressional ratification of the charter.

He argued that one section of the document, committing signatories to the doctrine of full employment, permitted England to maintain persistant deficits in its balance of payments, and to continue import restrictions and quota controls.

Once the United States ratifies the charter, Courtney said, we will not be able even to protest these policies. Our campaign for free, nondiscriminatory and expanding world trade will be set back indefinitely, he implied.

The charter has been signed by American delegates who participated in its formulation, and has been presented by the Administration to Congress for ratification. No action is expected on it, however, until next session.

Anti-Trust Policy Hit

Another speaker at today's session, Prof. Harry L. Hansen of the Harvard Business School, declared the Federal Government's anti-trust policy is in a "dangerous state of unbalance." It often hurts, rather than preserves, competition.

A consistent policy designed to prevent restraint of trade, according to Hansen, embodies many objectives besides preservation of competition.

But, he told the conference, the present unbalance stems from too much "preoccupation with preserving competitors to the sacrifice of other objectictives."

Yet price discriminations are frequently the means whereby buyers and sellers jockey to arrive at new prices, Hansen declared. "If we forbid price discrimination we go far along the road to forbidding price competition," he said.

The current anti-trust suit against the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. affords an example, he asserted.

"Forty years ago the large firm was commonly accused of lowering the standard of living by restricting production and raising prices," he said. "Now the essential charge is that the firm expands production too much, and charges too low prices."

Indian's Head in Bag Startles Postal Clerk

St. Louis, Oct. 11 (AP).—A postal clerk was sorting mail today when out of a brown paper bag rolled a shrunken human head adorned by long black hair.

The head, about the size of a big apple, was that of a Peruvian Indian. It was stolen from the Academy of Science two weeks ago.

Reaction of the clerk—working in the dead letter section—was not rec

Revised Zone Plan Presented to County

Blasts Council

Tax Sales Unfair, Lee Charges

Montgomery County Democratic chieftain E. Brooke Lee yesterday charged the county's charter government with discriminating against him and his real estate companies in tax sales.

Lee marched into yesterday's council meeting brandishing a "No Trespassing" sign posted by the county on land he contends he owns. The sign, he said, was one of some 40 uprooted yesterday morning by him and his business associates.

Similar signs have not been placed on other properties in the Eastern Suburban District advertised for sale at next Friday's tax auction, he asserted.

He charged that, although the county advertised for sale only 100 of the 600 properties on which taxes were delinquent, the list included 55 of 60 such parcels owned by him.

County Attorney David MacDonald denied there was any discrimination, saying eight other properties also had been posted. All county-owned property should be so posted, he added.

Lee told the council he would appear at the sale and offer the tax money and accrued interest due, which he said had been refused when offered previously. This offer, he said, would accomplish the purpose of collecting taxes, penalties and interest due on the lot.

"But if it is your purpose to attempt to appropriate these lots for the profit or use of Montgomery County or for any other purpose than to collect tax liens," he declared "we give formal notice that we will employ every legal means to prevent what we believe would be the taking of our property without due process of law."

The council approved two petitions for construction of curbs and gutters and for street resurfacing. One, in Glenview subdivision, Silver Spring, will cost an estimated $10,260. The second, at an estimated $59,339 in Indian Spring Manor and Indian Spring Park, Silver Spring, was approved with the exception of one street.

A revised zoning ordinance proposed for Prince Georges County, Md., was presented to the Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday by a special committee that had been named by the board.

The commissioners announced they will hold a public hearing on the revised proposal before it is adopted or rejected.

The proposed plan would permit construction of two and three-family row houses and would divide industrial and commercial classifications to light and heavy type. Provision also is made for zoning of planned communities such as Greenbelt and Langley Park in one operation.

Chief effect of the change would be blanketing into actual zoning of the fringe areas outside the metropolitan district, where zoning is now authorized but never has been imposed.

The changes were worked out by a committee composed of Waldo Burnside, Adrian P. Fisher and Ralph W. Powers for the commissioners; and J. Bond Smith, Fred W. Tuemmler and Robert M. Watkins for the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Columbus Descendant Has Son, Christopher

Madrid, Spain, Oct. 11 (AP).—Christopher Columbus has a son, born four days before the anniversary of his distinguished ancestor's discovery of America.

The son was born Sunday to Columbus, the young Duke of Veragua. The 24-year-old duke, who is a lowly lieutenant, junior grade, in the Spanish navy, holds the hereditary title of grand admiral. He said both his wife, Anunciada, and the baby are fine.

The baby will be christened Thursday. His name: Cristobal Colon (Christopher Columbus) de Caravajal y Ramirez, seventeenth Marquis of Jamaica.

Contracts Let For 2 Schools In Rockville

Signing of contracts for two new schools in Rockville, both for Negroes, was announced yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education.

A new high school was contracted for at a cost of $344,770 and an elementary school for $192,440, both expected to be completed by next fall.

The high school will replace the present Lincoln High School, which will be turned into a junior high. The new elementary school will permit the closing of the present Rockville, Scotland and Quince Orchard Schools and is expected to relieve overcrowding at River Road School.

The board announced the appointment of Nathan Adelsohn of Alexandria and Mrs. Ruth B. Linn of Silver Spring as psychologist and psychiatric social worker, respectively, for the county schools.

District Firm Bids Low on County School

Bids for construction of a 12-classroom Mount Rainier-Brentwood elementary school were opened yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education, meeting at Upper Marlboro.

Low bidder was the Blake Construction Co., Inc., of Washington, with a bid of $286,448. Award of the contract was held up pending receipt of State school funds.

The board was informed that the State Board of Public Works has approved a loan of $6,340,600 and a grant of $1,642,800 to the county but that funds probably would not be available until at least November 15.

William Magazine, president of the Standard Construction Company, which is building a 1500-unit apartment development in Langley Park, part of the McCormick-Goodhart estate, donated $7500 in cash for purchase of five acres of school land. Leander McCormick-Goodhart donated an additional five acres.

Assistant Superintendent William S. Schmidt reported that enrollment at the end of September was 28,157, an increase of 3,714 over last year. He reported that 11 county schools are on half time.

Final approval was given to plans for the Suitland junior-senior high school building for which bids will be opened November 8 and an addition for the Fairmount Heights Negro High School for which bids will be opened November 29.

Michigan U. Gets $3 Million Toward Medical Center

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 11 (AP).—With a grant of 3 million dollars for a new research building, the University of Michigan today announced plans for a giant 20-million-dollar medical center.

The 3-million-dollar donation was made by the Kresge Foundation.

It will finance one of five buildings in the university's 20-million-dollar program of medical expansion. The additions will enable the school to enlarge its medical student enrollment—about 500 at present—to exceed that of any other American university.

Speech Defect Survey Set For Schools

A survey to find the number of Alexandria school children with speech defects will be undertaken soon, Alexandria School Superintendent T. C. Williams said last night.

Williams told the Alexandria school board the survey will be made by specialists from the University of Virginia and the State Department of Education.

Presently, Alexandria schools have no classes for speech correction. The survey, according to Williams, is the "starting point" of corrective measures.

The school board last night took under study a proposal that George Washington University use the George Washington High School Stadium for at least one football game next fall. Board members said it would be desirable to learn the wishes of the city council before taking any action.

The university contract would be for five years, it was learned.

Hearing Held On School Aid

Programs of Federal aid to communities in which schools have been overburdened because of large Government projects were described yesterday before a House Labor and Education subcommittee.

The congressmen are holding hearings to determine Federal responsibility in assisting areas to provide school facilities for children of Federal workers.

Earl L. Struve of the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation estimated that next year the bureau will be asked to help in the education of more than two thousand children. When the bureau plans a reclamation project a school in the area is included as part of the contract, he said.

Keith Nielson of the National Park Service told the committee that there are 32 areas in which development of park lands has created a school problem. No funds are available to aid the communities except at Yellowstone, he said.

With Shirley Povich

OUTSIDE THIS IVORY tower on Pennsylvania ave. the bands were playing yesterday, the smoke-eaters marching and the big red wagons parading. The banners said it was Fire Prevention Week. Too late by 10 days, however, to save the job of Joe Kuhel.

The Nats are still without a manager, and you can say, too, that they are still without a ball team. It will be a lion-hearted citizen who takes the job of managing Griffith's also-rans. Whoever it is, he'll be walking into an eighth-place club that finished last because it was the worst team in the league.

POVICH

Clark Griffith at this point is pretty desperate; at least he ought to be. There's a clamor for his scalp, too, in a city surfeited by lackluster Washington clubs like the last one. The old gentleman has weathered criticism before, but never before have the wolf-howls been so close to his ears.

He has to come up with something besides a new manager, quickly, or the raps will worsen. Griffith's over-all record in Washington is good, but the season that is always remembered is the last one.

THERE ARE signs that he is taking the rubber off the bankroll, however. He's made a $70,000 pitch to bolster the league's worst outfield by buying Irv Noren, the Pacific Coast League's most valuable player, and he did gamble $60,000 on Pitcher Lloyd Hittle from the same league. That could be a start, but with only a laughable farm system of his own, the cash must keep flowing in big figures.

It was no coincidence that the Yankees and Dodgers were in the last World Series. They are the two clubs with the best farm systems. Four of Griffith's meager farm clubs finished last—Chattanooga, Charlotte, Hagerstown and Orlando. Obviously there is not much to draw from in that direction.

Somewhere he has to come up with a second baseman, at least two more outfielders, and some pitchers. The Washington catching, too, is on the frayed side with neither Jake Early nor Al Evans the eager performer he used to be. Facing Griffith is the biggest rebuilding job since 1912 when he moved into Washington and assembled a completely new ball team save for Walter Johnson.

KUHEL WASN'T the answer to the Nats' troubles in 1949. He had little to work with for sure, but Griffith was anguished all season by the listlessness of the club's play under Kuhel. He could forgive the defeats, but not the manner in which they were accepted. Despite the polite niceties when he let Kuhel go, Griffith was not charmed by his work.

He really blew his roof that night in August when the radio brought him the play-by-play of the Nats' game at Boston, and the clubs were tied up at 2-2 in the bottom of the eleventh. That's when, with two out and a Boston runner on third, Kuhel didn't order Sid Hudson to pass Ted Williams who broke up the game with a single.

Later Kuhel told newsmen that he pitched to Williams instead of Vern Stephens "because Williams didn't have a hit all night." That didn't appease Griffith, who considered it elemental that Williams must be considered a more dangerous hitter than Stephens under any circumstances. But it wasn't on the score of strategy that Kuhel was dismissed. Griffith didn't think the Nats were eager, under Kuhel.

AT THAT, Kuhel as manager did no worse a job than Griffith as club owner. In the procurement department, Griffith was no help. He let Kuhel open the season with a pitching staff that was pitifully weak, an outfield that was a high gamble, and without a reserve infielder except Mark Christman. Griffith permitted himself to be over-enchanted when the Nats won those nine in a row in May.

He's holding off on naming his next manager, he says, until he can sift the possibilities to bring the club a man with whip and lash and drive. He'd take a playing manager if he could find the man. He's in a spot now where he hardly dares to turn again to one of the family of Nats or former Nats as manager, as has been his custom. He's going to break with that ill-starred habit, he indicates.

Jimmy Dykes wants the job, despite his denials. Under Dykes, the Nats would be eager—or else. Griffith and Dykes were closeted in the same room in a New York hotel during the World Series, and reports had it they weren't talking about the Dodgers and Yankees.

Slash in Use Of Armory For Sports Is Proposed

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Use of the Armory for major sports events and other outside affairs will be curtailed drastically—if the District National Guard has its way.

Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.), member of the District Affairs Committee, last night attacked current management of the 4½-million-dollar building at 19th and East Capitol sts.

Teague revealed that he has complained to Commissioner John Russell Young that increasing use of the Armory for sports and other events is in violation of the law governing its operation.

Said Teague, 39-year-old combat hero who came out of World War II a full colonel, "My sole concern is with the National Guard. I feel it's getting no consideration at all."

Conflicts Cancel Drills

Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, named commandant of the local militia last August, wouldn't come right out and say his National Guard program was suffering.

He put it this way, "We want to do everything the Board of Trade and other interested parties want, but not at the expense of the National Guard."

At present, the Guard conducts three drill nights weekly. Sometimes schedules of outside events conflict and the drills have to be canceled. About 2000 Guardsmen are effected.

Abendroth also indicated his interest in taking over the managerial post for outside functions. It's currently held by Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman at $10,000 a year.

The general, receiving full pay on active duty from the War Department, said, "I'd be willing to do the job. Of course, with my other duties, I'd need an assistant." (As a paid officer, he couldn't accept the salary that goes with the job).

The Armory has been the site of college and high school basketball doubleheaders, indoor track meets and boxing shows. Bigger sports events are planned for the future and bookings of conventions, dances and other activities have been on the increase.

The law Congressman Teague refers t. is the one passed by the Eightieth Congress, creating the Armory Board. It stipulates that the Armory shall be operated and maintained primarily to provide facilities for quartering and training of the local militia.

It also stipulates that, secondarily, it is to provide suitable facilities for major athletic events, conventions and such other activities as may be in the interest of the District of Columbia.

Walsh Backs Bergman

Supporters of more wide-spread use point out that the bill, too, say the Armory shall be operated as nearly as practicable on a self-supporting basis.

The Guard, of course, pays nothing for its use. Only income comes from outside rentals. And the District budget provides annually about $209,000 for its maintenance.

Bergman, Armory manager, said last night, "We've always tried to cooperate in every way with the National Guard. I feel that we've never gone beyond any agreement made originally with Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, former commandant, or General Abendroth.

"I've always checked with them on dates and never received any complaints from either."

An Armory source revealed that in a 20-month period, August, 1948, through March, 1950, a check shows outside events taking away 66 of 260 drill nights.

Attorney Leonard P. Walsh, chairman of the Armory Board, said, "The Armory is supposed to be for both the National Guard and the other outside functions defined in the law. As I interpret it, it can't be under sole control of the military.

"I would like to see the manager get a chance to do the best job for making it self-sustaining. I think Bergman is doing a good job."

'Skins Lead In Offense With Baugh

Philadelphia, Oct. 11 (AP).—The champion Philadelphia Eagles and the Washington Redskins are setting the pacing defensively and offensively respectively in the National Football League.

Statistics released today show that the Eagles in winning three games have held their opponents to the lowest number of points, 17; the fewest number of first downs, 27, and the smallest amount of yards gained, 456.

Although the Eagles also hold the lead in rushing with 675 yards along the ground, they rank no better than fourth in total offense.

The Redskins head that division with 739 yards by forward passes and 447 yards rushing for a total of 1,186 yards in three games. In total offense Los Angeles is second with 1,115 yards, the Chicago Bears third with 1,043 and Philadelphia and Pittsburgh tied for fourth, each with 955.

Baugh's overhead attack has been good for 543 yards—tops in the league. Last year's champion, Tommy Thompson of the Eagles, is way down in tenth position.

Tereshinski Will Miss Bulldog Game

The Washington Redskins yesterday announced that Joe Tereshinski, veteran end, was "definitely out" of Sunday's game with the New York Bulldogs at Griffith Stadium. A leg injury was given as the cause.

Also missing from action will be Fullback Ed Quirk, whose damaged ankle has failed to heal, and Wingman Jim Peebles with a pinched nerve in his shoulder.

Baugh and Poillon Will Teach Their Specialties

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

For the first time in this area's history The Washington Post will stage a round-up of football players tonight at Griffith Stadium.

It's the Redskin Football Clinic, at which gridmen of every size and description will meet in a common desire to learn more about the game and enjoy a gala program.

Thousands will see the show, starting at 7 o'clock. Most of them will be future football stars, or players who have already achieved gridiron success, but a large portion of the audience will be plain grid fans who merely enjoy watching football.

It's a free show for one and all. Simply by clipping out the coupon in today's sports pages you can obtain free tickets for this brand-new entertainment and instructional display.

While the Redskins go through a workout in preparation for next Sunday's clash with the New York Bulldogs, they will be observed by every sort of grid student. Attending in force will be city and nearby coaches and their squads, representatives of every high school in the area, more than 1000 sandlot players, and full turnouts from boys clubs.

In addition, most of the military installations near Washington, such as Fort Myer, will send in their squads for a lesson in the finer points of football.

Some of the instructional features on tonight's program, as explained by Harry Wismer, the "Voice of the Redskins," will include:

1. Passing by Sammy Baugh—how he achieves his amazing accuracy; how he leads the receiver; how his long throws differ from shorter ones; how he holds the ball.

2. Punting by Baugh and Dick Poillon—how the ball comes off the foot; how it is possible to punt out "inside the 10" with amazing accuracy; quick-kicking.

3. The value of the "jump pass" as thrown by Harry Gilmer.

4. Pass defense and how it should be played This probably is the most vexing problem in the game today.

5. Placekicking for extra point: By Dick Poillon.

6. Kicking off by Jim Peebles, Mike Roussos and Herb Siegert.

7. Blocking in the line, especially trap plays.

Andy Davis' Fumbles Have Coach Worried

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Coach Bo Rowland of George Washington University has a problem, Mr. Anthony, and it's not just that his team is still looking for its first victory.

It's Andy Davis, the last guy whom you'd expect to be a problem.

Andy is G. W.'s best runner and passer, its best defensive player, one of its fiercest competitors, the team's leader, and a likable, well-behaved lad. Wherever G. W. has gone for two seasons, Andy has taken them.

Where then is the problem?

It's Andy latest tendency for fumbling in the clutch. Once in each of GW's first three games, Andy has carried the Colonials all the way inside their foes' 5-yard line only to lose the ball.

In the VMI game, Andy also fumbled on his own 20, and set up the Keydets' winning touchdown.

From the movies of GW's games, Bo hasn't detected anything wrong

"I don't know," Bo says shaking his head, maybe we're just expecting too much of Andy.

"He's only a sophomore. I guess we should expect him to make the mistakes of every other sophomore.

"He's not such a big guy, and he's played practically every minute of every game, and he's taken a terrific battering. Maybe that's it."

8th Boxer Of '49 Dies After KO in Grudge Bout

Detroit, Oct. 11 (AP).—A young Negro boxer, felled by a smashing head blow in the ring last night, died today with a blood clot on the brain.

Death of Talmadge Bussey, 26, was the eighth recorded ring fatality in the world this year.

The Negro lightweight fell unconscious in the ninth round of a furious battle with Luther Rawlings of Chicago. Referee Herman Spinelli called the fight and awarded Rawlings a knockout.

Rushed to St. Mary's Hospital, Bussey was operated on for a blood clot. He died 11 hours later.

Coroner Samuel B. Milton ordered a post mortem examination tonight. Police began an investigation.

Winner Was Down

The feature bout at Arcadia Roller Rink was a slugfest from the start. Rawlings himself was knocked down in the sixth round and he said later he couldn't remember a thing after that.

It was a revenge fight for Bussey. A month ago he lost a split decision to Rawlings at Marigold Gardens in Chicago

The white-hot temper of the battle spread over a frantic crowd of 907 spectators. When Bussey fell and the referee kept his seconds from touching him, the crowd surged toward the ring. Police had to hold them back.

Down—And Out

Still groggy, Bussey staggered out for the ninth round. But he lasted only a couple of blows before he fell again—unconscious.

Dr. Joseph Calahan, Michigan Boxing Commission doctor, worked over him for 10 minutes. Then the prostrate fighter was carried to the dressing room, where an emergency crew of firemen applied a pulmotor.

Fifteen minutes later an ambulance shrieked away to St. Mary's Hospital with the injured man. He remained unconscious after the operation and died at 1 p. m. (EST).

Before Bussey died, his manager, Eddie Higgins, said sadly:

"Even if he does recover, he'll never fight again."

The young lightweight, a native of Camden, Ala., entered the ring as a professional in 1945. He was married and the father of two children. He fought some 50 pro bouts. Once he took on Lightweight Champion Ike Williams, but was badly beaten.

The ring record book shows that at this time last year there were 13 ring fatalities. The 1948 total was 14. At this time in 1947 there were nine deaths.

Hoyas Have Henna Hairdos From Helmets

Georgetown's new football look even is extending to the hair of a host of its players.

Dye from the plastic helmets worn by the Hoyas is tinting their hair a weird red. Blond-haired fellows like Bill Conn, Bob Noppinger, Babe Baranowski, Connie O'Doherty and Jackie Juen are affected most.

Students are giving them a hard time.

Nothing they do seems to help. Maybe they should write "Ask Anne," The Washington Post expert in the women's section.

Trainer Barred In Mustard Injection Case

Baltimore, Oct. 11 (AP).—Shirley M. Ball of Laurel, Md., was suspended today as trainer and owner for one year after a hearing on a charge his horse was given an injection of mustard.

Ball denied any knowledge of his horse having been given a rectal injection of oil of mustard as claimed by State chemists after the seventh race at Laurel on September 28.

Georgetown's Bob Noppinger

College Player of Week

HIS COACH THINKS he's All-America timber. That's one good reason Georgetown's End Bob Noppinger is The Washington Post's college player of the week.

Big Bob, 6-foot-3, 215-pounder, played a whale of a game in the Hoyas' stunning 12-6 upset over Wake Forest's three-touchdown favorites.

Without question, he was the best football player on the field. In this day of offensive and defensive specialists, Noppinger is a rugged rarity. Despite the heat and physical beating he took, Bob went all the way, missing only six plays.

Offensively, he took a 20-yard fourth-down pass to the Deacon 6 to set up Georgetown's first score. Another time he galloped 28 yards with a pass.

It was on defense, though, that Noppinger was the standout. His play on grim goal-line stands was remarkable. He saved the game at least four times. A couple of other times he threw Wake Forest backs for huge losses.

At the end he was completely exhausted. He couldn't come back with the team. He was so beaten, Trainer Joe Kuczo thought it best for him to stay overnight at Wake Forest.

NOPPINGER'S teammates were well aware of his play. Tackle Tom Dolan, cocaptain, presented him with the game ball.

After the game, Coach Margarita said, "Bob did everything that a coach could ask of a football player. He blocked well, tackled well, was good on inside and outside plays. He's just a real good end, period."

Noppinger, a junior, is from Baltimore's Loyola High. Also a crack catcher, he once considered going with the New York Giants' organizations. As a freshman, he caught for the Hoyas.

Noppinger is the leading pass receiver for Georgetown with seven receptions for 116 yards.

His parents travel to every Georgetown game to see their 22-year-old son perform. Bob says his father, Michael A. Noppinger, Registrar of Titles for the State of Maryland, is the one who interested him in football. JACK WALSH.

Paul Richards Reported Likely Chisox Manager

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Sun Times said tonight that Paul Richards, who managed the Buffalo Bisons to the International League pennant, is "almost certain" to succeed Jack Onslow as pilot of the Chicago White Sox.

The newspaper said Richards, former New York Giants and Detroit Tigers catcher, "was approached by both major and minor league clubs with managerial offers for 1950" during the World Series but that he "committed himself to no agreement, pending disposition of talks with the White Sox."

Onslow, who came up from Memphis to manage the White Sox to sixth place this season, has one year of his contract to go.

"Lane (General Manager Frank Lane) and I will do some building immediately," said Vice President Charles Comiskey. "We first have to make up our minds whether to retain Onslow. If we decide against that we'll have to single out the man we consider a suitable successor."

Gasparilla Upsets Pilaster in 1½-Mile Sagamore

Bill Bennings . . .

AT LAUREL

DEAR FOLKS:

Among the jockeys here who are having trouble keeping their weight down are Bobbie Strange and Carson Kirk. The former had to cancel mounts the other day because of illness brought on by reducing. Kirk who once made light poundage with ease was battling recently to get under 115. Bobby Martin, leading hider here, goes to Garden State Park Saturday for a one-day stand, riding Alfoxie in the Vineland Handicap. Looks like a field of from 10 to 12 for Saturday's $15,000 Washington Handicap here. Let's see if we can discover a few winners on the Columbus Day program. See you on the rail. BILL.

Colt Wins Easily and Pays $7.20

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 11.—The $7500 Sagamore Stakes were shifted here from Pimlico this year but it would have been just the same with the favorite players if the event had been canceled instead.

Backers of the public choice, H. L. Straus' Pilaster, watched the 5-year-old go down to defeat before the speed of A. J. Sackett's Gasparilla today.

At the finish of the mile and a half marathon, Gasparilla held a length advantage over Pilaster, 1948 winner, who apparently had no excuse. Eight lengths behind the place came F. J. Vollmer's In First to be third with Alairne, owned by G. M. Jacobson of Washington, fourth and last.

The crowd of 8500 piled the money on Pilaster, the gelding breaking with odds of 2-to-5 on him. After the quartet had circled the course 1½ times, Gasparilla paid $7.20. The winner's time was 2:33, identical with that registered by Pilaster in his Sagamore victory.

Jockey Willie Downs of Curtis Bay, Md., who has been in something of a slump here, came through with three victories on the card. However, he failed to gain much ground on Martin who added two winners to bring his total to 15 for the session.

$68.80 Price O. K. On Weather O. K.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 11.—All records for a winning mutuel might have been broken here today but for the fact that this was an ideal Indian summer day. Enough people took the hunch and bet a few dollars on Weather OK to keep his price down to a mere $63.80. Despite the fact that Tagel at $2.60 won the first race, the daily double ending with Weather OK returned $187.40. HAIGHT.

Cruising Club of America Will Race—And Have Fun, Too

By Happy Walker

A MAJOR attraction holding the attention of area sailors this weekend is the annual rendezvous of the Cruising Club of America (Chesapeake Section) down on Chesapeake Bay. Widely known as the blueblood of yacht racing, the three-day affair features a buffet Thursday at the Annapolis Yacht Club.

Following Friday's races, the group gather aboard Carton Mitchell's Caribbee off Rhode River for an evening's frolic. The affair climaxes Saturday after a day of racing at the Gibson Island Y. C. with an oyster roast.

The Marine Trade Association resumes its fall and winter schedule of monthly meetings this Thursday at the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Scheduled to get under way at 8:15 p. m., the full meeting will be preceded by a dinner wtih the board of directors on hand. Included in the rather heavy agenda is the nomination of officers for the coming season. President A. B. Clarke reminds all members to attend.

Setting somewhat of a precedent, the annual meeting of the Fourth Region, American Power Boat Association, will be shifted from Baltimore to Washington this year. Chairman J. J. Hubbard has set Sunday, October 23 as the date and the Burlington Hotel as the place.

District AAU Meeting Thursday

The District of Columbia AAU will stage its annual meeting and election of officers for the coming year at Jewish Community Center Thursday, October 13, at 8 p. m.

In the same building, just 20 years ago, a group of sports-minded men met and formed the D. C. Association of the AAU.

Among those charter members were Eddie Rosenblum, currently president of the organization; James A. (Pappy) Sullivan, Shirley Povich, former District Boxing Commissioner Dr. O. U. Singer, Jim McNamara, E. Joseph Aronoff, Yank Robbins, Winfree Johnson, J. Kip Edwards, Robert Acorn (first president), Dr. George Sharpe, John O'Reilly, A. Earle Weeks and William Russell. The last three, all of whom are now dead, served terms as president.

Low net prizes were awarded for three age groups, 55-60, 61-65, over 65. Chester Leaken, Manor, 87-16—71, took the 55-60 class net with the second prize going to Ned Burnham, Burning Tree, 79-7—72.

Fishing Notes

Anglers Take to Trolling; Hodges, Blair Net 73 Huskies

By Ralph Murdock

BOTTOM FISHING is just about on the way out in the Upper Cresapeake Bay although the area from Solomons Island to Point Lookout is producing some good catches of trout. Trolling is now the vogue if you want to latch onto the stripers, blues and trout which will furnish the bulk of the sport for the next several weeks. The past week was undoubtedly a good one for the anglers who fished the Herring Bay area.

Murdock

HORACE HODGES and Archie Blair really got the blues at the Flag Pond when they landed 73 of the gamesters that hit the three-pound mark. Their skipper was Amman Woolford. It was Hodges' second trip in two days. On the first outing with Edward Davis, he caught 60 blues and an eight-pound rock. Kendall Doyle was the pilot. Their fishing success was achieved about 2 miles off Holland Point. The blues now being taken are larger than the fish that entered the bay several weeks ago.

HERE'S a good news item. Gordon Sessions and his mother, Mrs. Caroline Sessions of Washington, who have been spending their autumn vacation at the Carolina Hotel at Nag's Head, went fishing last week at Oregon Inlet. Their guide was Jesse Ethridge and the anglers landed a total of 50 flounder and one trout.

ON THE DUCK SITUATION, we have received some encouraging news from some of the northern States where the season opened on October 7. Maine officials report that black ducks, teal (both blue-wing and some green-wing), bluebills, whistlers and other species are abundant. Most of the hunters who took to the blinds got their limit. The official opening in our adjoining State will be November 18.

WHILE ON THE SUBJECT of hunting and guns, we would like to call your attention to Ohmer W. Webb of Washington, D. C. He won the West Hogan trapshooting tournament by topping a big field for all-around honors by breaking 277 out of 300 clay pigeons. His score was accomplished in the singles, doubles and handicap events at Asbury Park. Shooters from 10 States participated.

In a previous shoot, he won the preliminary handicap in the Grand American tourney at Valdalia, Ohio. The latter tourney draws the cream of the national crop.

Mrs. Goodman Wins Muncaster Cup

Mrs. H. H. Goodman used a 30 handicap with 91, 92—183 rounds for a low net of 153 to win the 36-hole Class A Sutton Muncaster Cup at a Washington Country Club ladies tournament Monday and Tuesday.

Low gross went to Mrs. Charles Egenroad, 82, 84—166. Other net awards were won by Mrs. Howard Lady, 99, 92—191-32—159; Mrs. Gordon Simmonds, 96, 93—189-28—161; Mrs. Henry Riley, 95, 92—187-22—165; Mrs. George Bailey, 96, 85—181-14—167.

Pay-Reclassification Held Up by Rating System Controversy

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: The controversy over the rating system has delayed action on the pay-reclassification bill for the 885,000 classified employes.

Senate conferees are insisting on "performance" instead of efficiency ratings. Their plan would have only three possible ratings—outstanding, satisfactory and unsatisfactory. Employes could appeal unsatisfactory ratings to boards within their agencies. They would have no appeal to civil service.

House conferees aren't defending the present system. In fact, Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.) says it's too cumbersome and must be streamlined. However, he and his House colleagues have been assured by the Civil Service Commission that it will take definite steps to revamp its rating system. The commission feels the Senate proposal would tie its hands.

HAZARDOUS PAY: The conferees yesterday struck out the provision in the Senate bill authorizing the Civil Service Commission to pay a differential up to 50 percent during the next year for employes in hazardous work. Left in the bill was a provision to instruct the commission to make a study of the Government's hazardous jobs and to recommend specific differentials in pay for workers in them to Congress.

The conferees yesterday also voted to exclude employes of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Architect of the Capitol from the bill. Another meeting will be held today on the classified bill a... both the Senate and the House will be asked to approve the conference report on the topflight pay bill which was okayed yesterday by the 10-man conference.

Meantime, no session has been fixed for the postal pay raise bill. Several informal meetings have been held on it and it now appears that the conferees will vote out a bill closely resembling the House bill which is far more liberal than the Senate's bill.

VA: Its officials are trying to avert another big layoff of its administrative employes and the closing of hundreds of its field offices. Several hundred regular employes who are threatened with the loss of their jobs are in this city.

The President is backing up officials of the Veterans Administration to avoid the cutback. He yesterday asked Congress to approve a supplemental appropriation of $17,500,000 for the agency. In a message to Congress, the President said that VA has available $272,333,600 for all of its programs other than hospital and medicine. He wrote:

"A detailed reexamination of all of these other programs reveals areas in which substantial economies can be made by reducing the level of service. However, in certain cases, particularly the loan guaranty and readjustment allowance programs, most recent workload data shows that the forecasts on which the budget was based have been exceeded."

Even if VA gets the $17,500,000, it will be forced to trim its operating expenses upwards of eight million dollars. Apparently the reduction will be made, as the President said, by reducing the level of service. But if the request is denied, a major layoff will be ordered and hundreds of offices closed.

VA's budget troubles were reported here shortly after Congress approved its 1950 budget. Denials appeared elsewhere.

NOTES: John F. Richter has been appointed legal assistant to Federal Trade Commissioner John Carson . . . Dr. Joseph F. Brewster has retired after 22 years of service as a sugar chemist at the National Bureau of Standards . . . The Court of Claims yesterday awarded $1473.18 in back pay to Lawrence A. Oxley who, it decided, was illegaly laid off from the Labor Department . . . Andrew Faucette is the counsel to the Senate Civil Service Committee in its inquiry on the conduct of the hearing examiner test. He's a former law partner of Chairman Johnston. Agencies have been advised not to hire examiners from the civil service eligible register until the investigation is complete.

GSA: Jess Larsen is about to take a long step toward the integration of agencies in his General Services Administration.

He's about to order the merger of all agency offices in the field into 11 major GSA regional offices. This will affect field offices of the Public Building Administration, War Assets, Bureau of Federal Supply, Federal Works, Bureau of Community Facilities among others.

D. C. Attorney Dies of Polio; 7 New Area Cases Reported

ON A HAPPIER DAY—Lorne Smith Birch, jr., who died of bulbar poliomyelitis yesterday, is shown in this recent family portrait with his wife, Mrs. Iris Birch, and their son, Lorne 3d,

A 27-year-old Washington attorney died of bulbar poliomyelitis early yesterday. Meanwhile, area health officials reported seven new cases, six in the District.

The victim was Lorne Smith Birch, jr., of 2615 Southern ave. se. He was associated with Gordon Pickett Peyton in the practice of corporate and administrative law, with offices in the DuPont Circle Building. He became the seventh area polio fatality this year.

Peyton said his associate complained of a severe headache Friday, went home and spent Saturday in bed. When he attempted to get up Sunday morning, Peyton said, Birch had lost the use of his legs.

He was taken to Providence Hospital Sunday and transferred to Gallinger Monday, where he was placed in a respirator. A throat operation to free his respiratory passages was of no avail and he died at about 4:15 a. m. yesterday.

Birch came here in November, 1948, soon after graduation from Columbia University Law School near the top of his class. He took his A. B. degree from Columbia in 1943, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

During the war, Birch served with the Army Airways Communications System in Iran and Egypt. While in Cairo, he married the former Miss Iris Cummings of North Shields, Northumberland, England, now of the Southern ave. address. She survives him along with their 2-year-old son, Lorne S. Birch 3d.

He is also survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne S. Birch of Malverne, Long Island, N. Y. The funeral will take place in Malverne at 10 a. m. Thursday.

The new District polio cases were:

A 13-year-old boy of the 3500 block of Fulton st. nw., who was taken to Children's Hospital October 2; a 7-year-old boy of the 200 block of Q st. nw., who was admitted to Children's September 30; a 2-year-old boy of the 4400 block of Davenport st. nw., admitted to Children's September 29.

A 3-year-old boy of the 300 block of 53d st. ne., admitted to Gallinger October 5; a 2-year-old boy of the 300 block of McLean ave. sw., admitted to Gallinger October 1, and a 22-year-old girl of the 3200 block of Wisconsin ave. nw., admitted to Gallinger October 9.

The seventh victim is a 6-year-old Tauxemont, Fairfax County, girl, who was admitted to Children's Hospital Monday.

District health officials said that after the seasonal slackening of polio they will discontinue daily polio reports, and will issue a weekly list each Friday henceforth.

Gas Light Rate Boost Bid Halted

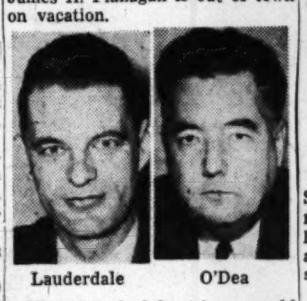
PUC Turns Down Request to Extend Hearing; Decision On Appeal Put Off

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Lengthy public hearings ended yesterday on the Washington Gas Light Co. appeal for higher District rates as the Public Utilities Commission cut off the people's counsel in a sharp exchange.

Former People's Counsel James W. Lauderdale, acting as PUC chairman, denied a closing request of People's Counsel John O'Dea to hold the hearing record open two more days to allow further study of the revised company rate schedule filed Monday.

The PUC will not decide how much increase it will allow the company to charge for at least 10 days since PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan is out of town on vacation.



Lauderdale O'Dea

The rate schedule at issue would yield the company $900,000 additional revenue, of which small consumers would pay 10 percent and the Federal Government 3 percent.

This rate proposal was submitted to supersede one—based upon "scientific" rate-making methods—filed last month and would have actually meant a smaller gas bill to the Government.

Began in July

The rate proceeding, which began July 14, ended amid indications that the PUC would settle a rate increase somewhere between five percent and the company's seven percent request.

PUC approval of the full seven percent boost would increase the monthly bill of the average person using gas for cooking by about 34 cents, and $1.07 for those who also heat with gas.

The company also is seeking to substitute a uniform rate schedule for all classes of customers in place of the present multiple rate schedule.

As the hearing drew to a close at noon yesterday, O'Dea told the commission that he wanted more time to study the new rate exhibits; that he had received the transcript an hour before the hearing opened.

"Do you have any reason to doubt the company exhibits?" Lauderdale asked.

"No," said O'Dea, "because I haven't even had time to read the transcript."

"Seem Clear"

Lauderdale suggested that the exhibits "seem pretty clear on their face value," adding that they proposed a rate plan more favorable to the average customer and make Uncle Sam bear part of the brunt of the increase.

At that point O'Dea said: "I haven't attempted to tell others in this proceeding what they should do, and I resent now being told what I should do."

After summarizing the content of the exhibits and the testimoney on them, Lauderale commented that he did not know "why you should have any quarrel with them (the company exhibits). You have not seen fit to question any of the testimoney during the hearing or file any evidence on your own."

The acting chairman then ruled that O'Dea's motion to keep the record open two more days would be denied. "I see no purpose in keeping it open any longer," he said.

The PUC also overruled an attempt by Francis Ortman, counsel for the District Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers, to dismiss the entire rate case.

Throughout the hearing, the appliance group has concentrated its fire on the contention that the company's sales promotion program on gas appliances is giving independent plumbers and appliance dealers unfair competition.

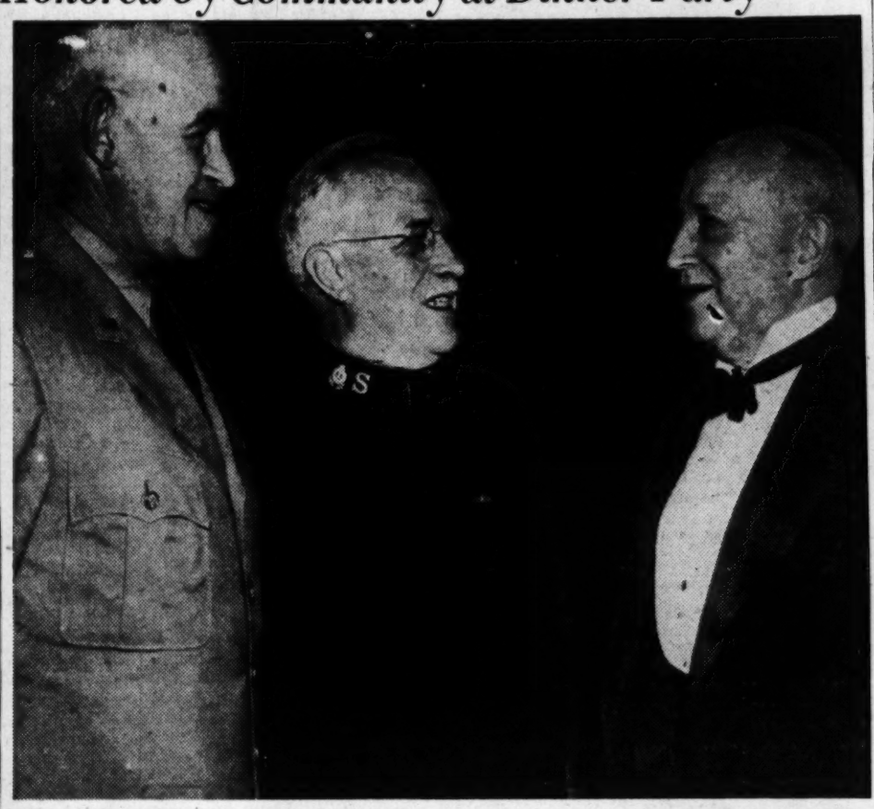
Salvation Army Staff Chief John Allan Honored by Community at Dinner Party



NOTABLES AT DINNER—Gen. Omar N. Bradley (left), chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Eugene Meyer (right), chairman of the Board of The Washington Post, chat with Commissioner John J. Allan, Chief of Staff of the Salvation Army, last night at the Mayflower Hotel. Commissioner Allan was guest of honor

The Washington Post

Commissioner John J. Allan, Salvation Army chief of staff, last night leavened a dinner in his honor with humor—by describing a unique sweater he wore to school as a boy.

"On the front of the little red sweater was emblazoned the words: "The Salvation Army," and on the back: "Heaven or Hell—Which?"

"No wonder I got much of the latter from the youngsters," added Commissioner Allan, who since those days served in both World Wars as chaplain, won the Croix de Guerre for conspicuous bravery, and now holds the rank of colonel in the United States Army Reserve.

First Contribution

"That red sweater was the boyish way I made my contribution to the Salvation Army message of hope, when I was 8 or 9," said Commissioner Allan. He is the first American-born world leader of the organization which today operates in 94 countries and colonies, using nearly one hundred languages to proclaim its message, which he said is:

"Thou shalt love the Lord they God with all thine heart and thy neighbor as thyself."

Stressed By Bradley

The ultimate importance of this message was stressed by another speaker at the dinner in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom—another distinguished soldier in another Army, Gen. Omar N. Bradley.

"Men of good will are now working tirelessly to further international understanding by applying to the relations between states, the principles first demonstrated by William Booth for relations between men," said the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"Armed forces can wage wars but they cannot create peace which comes only from the hearts of men," said General Bradley. Pointing out that "new weapons have not established a just, enduring peace," he declared:

"That task falls to the people of the democratic countries, and the Salvation Army is one of their instruments best fitted to help us secure that peace."

Warning that "the avowed intention of communism is destruction of the individuality of man," the former Army Chief of Staff said "we must stand firm in defense of our ideals."

Lauding Commissioner Allan's "outstanding life of service," General Bradley said "This devotion of a man to a principle is a living illustration of the devotion which every man should feel in his heart is due to his fellows, and through them to his Creator."

Commissioner Allan, in reporting on his global social service and religious command, said he found in a recent tour of Europe "evidence of a greater tendency to turn to the spiritual ideals of religion as the only hope for the world."

35,000 Attend

For example, he said, "I recently conducted two great open air services—one in Stockholm, with 35,000 people who listened most reverently, and another in Helsinki, where 10,000 people trudged to the top of a hill to stand silently and interestedly during our simple service."

"I do not think people are as interested in what might be called 'organized religion' as they are in discovering a way of life that will satisfy their spiritual longings."

"The Salvation Army," he said, "is not engaged so much in building a Church as in bringing the comforts of the spirit to change the hearts and lives of men."

But he added, "We believe that no man or woman builds on a spiritual foundation without improving his general condition."

Therefore, he said, the Army operates hospitals and missions and schools, throughout the world, ministering to the physical needs as well as the spiritual hunger of peoples ranging from the headhunters in the Celebes to the alcoholic derelicts on 9th st. nw.

Indispensable Role

This role that the Salvation Army plays is indispensable in this country as well as throughout the world, Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, said.

Meyer, who presided at the dinner sponsored by the National Capital advisory board of the Salvation Army, said "There are many respects in which the promotion of human welfare can still be done better by voluntary associations of private citizens than by any governmental body."

"I am not one of those who believe that Government should not endeavor to create conditions conducive to the general social and economic welfare or that a country is headed down the road to statism simply because it promotes social security, aid to public education and other sound and socially forward-looking programs.

"But I do believe that there are limits to what governments can or should do in this field. When they exceed those limits they threaten to totalitarianize society by suppressing not only initiative and thrift but the normal human impulses of generosity and kindliness and individual responsibility for one's fellowman."

Meyer said the Salvation Army is "an outstanding example of the spirit of charity in action under free institutions."

$175,000 Is Asked for Fort Stanton Park Pool

Relief of Crowding At Anacostia Tank Sought; Plans Call For No Segregation

President Truman yesterday sent to the Capitol a request for appropriation of $175,000 to build a new swimming pool at Fort Stanton Park in Southeast Washington.

The funds were requested for the National Park Service "to relieve the congested conditions now existing at the Anacostia pool," according to Acting Budget Bureau Director F. J. Lawton.

A. E. Demaray, associate director of the Park Service, yesterday said the pool would be operated "on an nonsegregated basis' by the National Capital Parks, Department of Interior.

The pool, plus locker facilities, will be ready next summer, Demaray said, if Congress appropriates the money.

Population Gain Cited

Assistant Secretary of the Interior C. Girard Davidson yesterday said that a southeast location was selected for the new pool "because of the tremendous increase in population in that area, 300 per cent increase since 1940."

The only one of the six Interior Department pools now located in Southeast is Anacostia.

Anacostia pool was closed June 30 for the rest of the summer by Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug, after whites and Negroes had clashed there on three suecessive days. Fort Stanton Park is near a large new Negro housing development.

Anacostia is one of six operated by Government Serviees, Inc., under a contract with Interior that forbids segregation. At all six pools the District Recreation Board operates segregated morning swimming schools. These schools are segregated for whites at Takoma, McKinley, Anacostia and East Potomac, and for Negroes at Francis and Banneker.

Agreement Approved

In August, the Recreation Board approved an agreement under which all Interior recreation facilities, except swimming pools, would be taken over by the board, which has insisted on segregated swimming.

In the request for the $175,000, contained in a supplemental appropriations bill, Lawton said the new pool was "necessary to serve the Southeast area of the District, the present facilities being inadequate to meet existing needs."

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the Recreation Board, expressed amazement when informed of plans for the new pools after a meeting of the board.

"It's the first I've heard of it," he said. "We've spent years planning on an intelligent basis for construction of swimming pools. This is another example of our being left in the dark on recreation matters. We ought at least to have been consulted about where pools should be built."

Other Board Actions

Meanwhile, the Board of Recreation:

1. Upheld Superintendent Milo F. Christiansen in refusing to issue a permit to the Trinidad Community Association, a Negro group, for use of Wheatley School, Montello ave. and Neal st. ne., as a meeting place.

2. Asked the superintendent for a report on a request of the Slowe School P-TA that Negroes be permitted to use playground facilities at Noyes, Turkey Thicket and Edgewood playgrounds.

3. Recommended to Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West that action on a bill before Congress "to transfer control of Federally owned golf courses under the Department of the Interior to the Board of Recreation" be delayed until completion of negotiations between the board and the department.

4. Delayed until its next meeting action on a request from the Commissioners for comments on a bill to give the Commissioners control over all public swimming pools, playgrounds and parks situated in the District.

3 Children Hurt Darting Into Street

Three District children were injured darting across busy streets yesterday when struck by automobiles.

Police said the young victims of three separate accidents all ran out into the street in front of vehicles. They listed them as:

Kathleen Bowling, 3, of 477 1 st. nw., who suffered a fractured left leg when hit by an auto driven by William H. Grimes, 22, of 811 5th st., on I st. near 5th st.

Richard Vailes, 4, of 5525 Central ave. se., struck on the street in front of his home by a car driven by Andrew G. D'Urso, 22, of 1003 8th st. se. He was admitted to Causalty Hospital with a fractured leg and possibly a fractured skull.

Sonia Shipe, 7, of 2020 Naylor rd. se., who suffered a brain concussion when she was hit crossing the street near her home by a car driven by James W. Coltrain, 22, attached to the Naval Air Station. Sonia was admitted to Providence Hospital.

No charges were made against the three drivers.

A 2-year-old Arlington boy, Gary Paul Ricucci, of 2681 S. Pierce st., was taken to Anderson Clinic yesterday following an accident in front of his home.

The child was injured when a truck, driven by Harry W. McPherson, 22 of 838 S. Quincy st. and belonging to the Jefferson Cleaners in Arlington, struck him as he played in the street, police said.

September Traffic Deaths Totaled Ten

Traffic accidents claimed 10 lives in the District last month, a toll which has not been equalled since February, 1948.

It was a month which saw 1074 traffic accidents as compared with 983 for September, 1948.

Police figures released yesterday showed that 457 persons were injured.

Seven of the 10 fatalities were pedestrians. Three persons were killed crossing the street in the middle of the block, and two when they stepped out from behind or between parked cars.

In a breakdown showing the causes of accidents, the police report listed nearly 300 accidents that occurred when drivers failed to give full time and attention to driving, or failed to yield the right of way.

Negligent Homicide Charged to Bus Driver

A coroner's jury yesterday held Hugh N. Hanger, 24, of 237 14th st. ne., a Capital Transit Co., bus driver, for court trial on charges of negligent homicide growing out of the traffic death of Harry S. Hall, 65, Washington attorney.

Hanger was released in a total bond of $1300, for a Municipal Court hearing Monday. He was also charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Hall, a resident of Fredericksburg, Va., with law offices here, died in Emergency Hospital Sunday after he had been struck by the bus at 13th st. and New York av. nw., the preceeding Friday.

Police quoted a witness at the inquest as saying the bus was travelling at a high rate of speed on 13th st. nw. as it turned left into New York av.

Embassy Servant Has Traffic Trouble

An employe of the Honduras Embassy escaped injury yesterday when the car he was driving collided with a truck, smashed a traffic signal, and came to rest against a retaining wall at 16th and U sts. nw., police reported.

The man, Carlos Gomez, a servant at the Embassy, 4715 16th st. nw., could offer no explanation for the accident other than his inability to speak English, according to police.

Although Gomez ran through two red lights at 40 miles per hour, police said witnesses reported, he was not charged because of diplomatic immunity.

The truck driver, Lawrence Toliver, 1006 W st. nw., also was uninjured.

Damage to each vehicle was estimated at $300 and to other property, $1000.

Burglar Suspect

Man Caught In Roof Leap Amid Shots

A housebreaking suspect was arrested early yesterday after a 20-foot leap, amid a flurry of police gunfire, from the roof of a building at 1610 U st. nw.

The suspect, Charles Jones, jr., 27, of 1911 4th st. nw., was held in $3000 bond by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence for continued hearing October 19.

A second man who also leaped from the roof made good his escape.

The action started shortly before 5 a. m. when Police Pvts. D. M. Mansfield, D. D. Brill and D. H. Gould answered a complaint that men were on the roof.

Mansfield, on one side of the structure, shouted an order to the pair to come down. When it went unheeded, he fired a shot into the air.

Brill and Gould, on the other side of the building, heard the shots and thought the suspects were firing at them so Gould let go with two shots as the men jumped.

Both fled down an alley leading into the 1900 block of New Hampshire ave. nw. Jones was picked up later in the vicinity.

Buses Urged To Cut Classes On Part-Time

Parents representing six elementary schools on part-time programs yesterday conferred with School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning on a proposal to use buses to transport the children to sections of the city where there is available classroom space.

Dr. Corning, who described the closed meeting as "exploratory" said he outlined to the parents advantages and difficulties that would result from transporting the children out of their home communities.

The parents were asked to return to their schools for an expression of opinion from parent-teacher groups. At present 4000 children are attending school on half-day schedules because of a shortage of facilities in new residential areas. Other areas have half empty classrooms.

Schools represented at yesterday's meeting were the Kenilworth, Congress Heights, Randle Highlands, Patterson, Stanton and Payne.

Dr. Corning said that if the plan was put into operation all part-time education would be eliminated

4 Suspects Cleared in Sex Slaying

Police yesterday released four suspects in the sex-slaying of 8-year-old Harrison Walker whose nude and torn body was found Saturday in Rock Creek near the Pennsylvania av. bridge.

One of the men released was a 53-year-old man whose shirt had been stained with blood. An FBI report said that tests showed the shirt had not been blood-spattered by an external force. There was not enough blood on the shirt to make group-type tests, the report said.

Two other men are being held for further questioning at the First Precinct Station. Both were picked up in Rock Creek Park near the scene of the crime.

The murder weapon has not yet been found, police declared. Officials expressed the theory that a jagged instrument, such as a broken bottle may have been used to inflict the 17 wounds suffered by the lad.

2 D. C. Policemen Suspended On Charges of Drunkenness

Two Metropolitan policemen—one a rookie, the other with nine years of service—were suspended from the force yesterday on charges of drunkenness.

The rookie, Pvt. Robert R. Clonan, 28, was arrested by Arlington police Monday night on complaint of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Troutt, 4753 N. 21st rd., Arlington.

At a hearing before Judge Hugh Reid in Arlington County Court yesterday, Clonan was fined $5 and costs on charges of drinking in public. Clonan joined the force last June and was attached to the Third Precinct.

The other officer was Pvt. Ralph Harper, 36, of 5009 56th ave., Hyattsville, Md. A veteran radio dispatcher, he had been transferred to beat duty in the Twelfth Precinct in August. He was suspended at 7:24 a. m. yesterday by Lieut. George E. Cooper at the precinct station on charges of being under the influence of alcohol while on duty. He joined the force July 1, 1940.

Harper will face trial board action. But such action will not be necessary in the case of Clonan. Rookies are on probation their first year and may be summarily dismissed.

3 District Men Face Arlington Breaking Charge

Arlington police yesterday charged three Washington men with breaking into a Safeway store at Kenmore and Wilson blvd., about 4:15 a. m.

Held in Arlington County jail on the charge were: James Randolph Kelly, 25, of 819 5th st. nw.; Edward Franklin Howard, 26, of 2211 H st. nw., and Chester Lee Turner, 18, of 2403 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Police said the trio was cornered in the store after Officer Raymond Wanner shined a light on the group while checking a rear door.

Also participating in the arrest were Sergt. Harvey Barnett, and Officers Freelander Sigmundsson, William Horner and Michael Serafin.

Tobin Opens Federal Drive For Chest

Two thousand Government workers took their marching orders yesterday in a giant rally kicking off the D. C. government unit Community Chest campaign.

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, unit chairman, told the workers that Washington needed Community Chest funds more than most cities, because "so many of us are not native sons and thus cannot rely on relatives for help in time of need."

The Red Feather goal for 1950 is $3,991,719. Eight thousand "keymen," Government employe solicitors, are seeking to raise $1,585,411.

Secretary Tobin reported that three Government units had already "gone over the top" with 100 percent contributions.

The keynote speech was delivered by Undersecretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman, Government units special gifts chairman, in the Interdepartmental Auditorium.

Chapman told the keymen that giving to the Community Chest was "not a charity, but a responsibility."

"When I was a boy in Virginia," Chapman said, "my father died one July, just before the tobacco crop had to be harvested. Our neighbors showed up one day soon after to harvest and save our crop. We are being asked today to help the way I was helped many years ago."

Frank J. Luchs, chairman of the Community Chest Federation Campaign, stressed a slogan of "Give Early and Give Enough." He told the workers that a contribution of one day's take home pay was being suggested for Government employes making less than $5000 a year, and a contribution of one percent of gross income, for employes making more than $5000 a year.

Miss Karen Kristiansen, Veterans Administration clerk-typist, said she was working for the Government unit because she wanted to keep the feeling of good will alive all year, instead of just during Christmas.

Premier Nehru Feted At Blair House Dinner

THE PRIME MINISTER OF INDIA, Jawaharlal Nehru, was the guest of the President and Mrs. Truman at a dinner last evening at Blair House. Although it was a state occasion of great moment, the dinner was small owing to the size of the Blair House dining room. Had the White House been ready for occupancy, a dinner of greater number would doubtless have been given.

The distinguished company last evening were the Prime Minister's sister, Madame Pandit, Ambassador of India; Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of the Prime Minister, who flew from London with her father in the President's plane Independence, and Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, secretary general of the Ministry of External Affairs, and former Ambassador of India.

Also, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, the Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn; the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Louis Johnson, Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, and Loy W. Henderson, American Ambassador to India.

Today there will be a quiet luncheon at the Indian Embassy for the visiting statesman and in the afternoon he will receive members of the Indian community at the chancery at 4 o'clock.

Prime Minister Nehru was a guest at the temporary White House last evening, and today he is going to the Indian Embassy to be with his sister, Ambassador Pandit, for the remainder of his visit in Washington. He will leave for New York on Saturday, October 15.

The hostess was gowned in a gray and blue chiffon sari with gold and ruby accessories. Mrs. Satterthwaite wore a cool black silk frock and blue bonnet.

The Satterthwaites are sailing Friday for London on the Queen Mary. They will remain in London for a week, fly to Istanbul for a 10-day visit and then go to Ceylon.

Yellow and red roses decorated the embassy for yesterday's party. A delicious buffet was served which included some famous curry dishes from Ceylon. Windows were opened wide and many guests enjoyed a cool supper on the terrace.

Mrs. Truman Spends Afternoon at D. C. W. Delegates' Reception

By Nicha Soure

WHILE PRESIDENT TRUMAN was busy greeting Prime Minister Nehru from India, Mrs. Truman was equally occupied welcoming 300 members of the Daughters of Colonial Wars yesterday.

"She looks so well!" and "How rested she looks" were the most repeated comments about the First Lady at the reception in her honor at the Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter House. Mrs. Truman, who did look well, wore a black tea dress fashioned with black lace neckline, sleeves and peplum.

After being in the receiving line for 50 minutes greeting the members, Mrs. Truman chatted with Mrs. Benjamin F. Buckley, national president of the DCW, and Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, State president, for a full half hour. Mrs. Truman appeared to be in no hurry to leave.

In Receiving Line

WITH MRS. TRUMAN in the receiving line were Mrs. Buckley, Mrs. Houghton, Mrs. Joseph B. Paul, national secretary; Mrs. Leonard G. Rundstrom, organizing president; and Mrs. Ryland Bryant, honorary State president. Introductions to the receiving line were made by Col. Edwin S. Hartshorn, jr.

It was during Mrs. Bryant's administration as State president of the Washington, D. C. Society that Mrs. Truman became a life member of the Daughters of Colonial Wars. At this time, the local society entertained at a tea for Mrs. Truman and she reciprocated with a Valentine Day tea for the DCW at the White House.

Mrs. Truman was asked if the newspaper picture this week showing the First Lady sitting sober-faced at the World Series games was an indication of her sympathy for the Brooklyn Dodgers. She replied in the negative, saying she was sure "a ball was ready to fall on our heads.

DAR Leaders Present

AT THE RECEPTION was Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Also present were Mrs. J. B. Patton of Ohio and Mrs. Edwin S. Lammers of Texas, both candidates for the office of president general.

But pressing problems that might have come up at the national board meeting of the DAR now convening in Washington were forgotten, at least for the afternoon. The Indian summer weather caused the patriotic women to dab at their foreheads as they waited in the receiving line to greet the First Lady and the national officers of the DCW.

The Marine Band Orchestra played for the reception. In an adjoining room a flower-decked tea table was filled with dainty Swedish pastry and sandwiches. Mrs. Roger Williams was in charge of the tea table.

Aid Project Discussed

SERVICE to the foreign-born, project for the coming year of the Washington Chapter, National Council of Jewish Women, highlighted discussions yesterday at a meeting of the group.

Marking the fifty-sixth anniversary of the National Council, the local organization held its first meeting of the season at the Jewish Community Center.

George Pikser, director of the Jewish Social Service Agency in Washington, lauded the council for its work with the foreign born. The council specializes in the reception of immigrants to this area as well as in their location and search for relatives and housing. In Mr. Pikser's opinion, employment is not the greatest problem of the Jewish DP's, but housing.

Elliot M. Shirk, director of the resettlement division of the Displaced Persons Commission, expressed optimism concerning pending DP legislation in Congress.

At Mayflower Show

Irene Molds '24 and '49 In Fetching Silhouette

By Peggy Preston

TAKE A BLACK FOX MUFF, a slim, tapered parasol, a sheathe of a skirt and a high-standing hat. Add these fashion ingredients of 25 years ago to the newest in fabric and design. Voila!—that's high style for 1950.

On the runway yesterday in the ballroom at the Mayflowers Hotel, a parade of willowy models was visible proof that the recipe works like a charm. With a bit of figuring on her figure problems, the average woman can do much better by this season's silhouette than she ever did by the droopy "New Look."

Displayed before several hundred feminine guests was the entire fall collection of Irene, West Coast designer, who dresses Hollywood's finest. The occasion was the annual luncheon-benefit staged by members of the women's board of Columbia Hospital. Fashions were presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co., and Nancy Osgood of WRC was commentator.

Combines Old and New

THE TECHNIQUE of combining the old and new in fashion has found an able exponent in Irene. With meticulous care she has assembled a wearable, as well as dramatic group of costumes. The flared over-drape on a tight skirt; a piece of satin, gathered up in a wide curve on the side of a bouffant skirt. These are touches that she executes with skill, and which will flatter the poorest figure.

Soft, muted colors in crisp, new fabrics help make her clothes noteworthy. Against them the favorite accessories of another fashion era seems quite at home. Umbrellas with metal handles go hand in glove with her slim, elegant suits; muffs, fox-trimmed stoles and jet beading are perfect with her more formal outfits.

Proceeds from the show should add up to a tidy sum. For the entire ballroom was filled to capacity for the event.

With Mrs. Almirall

MRS. FRANCES C. ALMIRALL, president of the board had at her table a group of guests that included Mrs. Clark Clifford, Mrs. Wiley Bucharian, Mrs. J. Lawn Thompson, Mrs. John Wilkins, Mrs. Wilfred Goodwin, Mrs. J. Spencer Weed, Mrs. Charles Goetz and Mrs. Clark Diamond.

Mrs. Robert E. Moran was hostess to another large group and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim's guests included Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador.

Among others noted were Madame Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Edward Treglown, Mrs. Robert W. Fleming, Mrs. Donald McKnew, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, and Mrs. Louise Brune.

THE WOMEN of Belle Haven Country Club, Alexandria, Mrs. Wiley Buchanan, Mrs. J. luncheon-fashion show today at 1 p.m. Mrs. Eugene Olmi, chairman, has asked the following members to assist; Mrs. Clarence Simpson, Mrs. George C. Landrith, Mrs. James Gooch, Mrs. Chester Pierce, Mrs. Robert King and Mrs. Arthur Varela.

Fashions will be presented by Jelleff's under the direction of Sue Boteler.

FOR THE NEEDLE AND THREAD CLAN:

No one can deny that the zipper is a great invention. But many a modern seamstress has gnashed her teeth in anguish as the slippery gadget evaded her efforts to stitch it securely into a placket.

If you've experienced such "zipper trouble" then you'll want to stop in at the Hecht Co., Thursday or Friday. A special illustrated lecture on up-to-date methods of sewing in zippers will be given at intervals throughout the two days in the notions department.

Miss Helen Landgren of the Talon Educational Services, New York, will conduct the lectures. She promises to stress simplified methods of zipper insertion, and will give you instruction leaflets for home study.

Gay Peaked Hats Give Youthful Air

I THINK the new little peaked hats are one of the prettiest hat fashions we've had in a long time. Almost everyone looks better with a little height to her hat, but usually higher crowns make one look older, and who wants that?

The little peaked hats do just the opposite—make you look young and gay and amusing. They are close fitting caps or tiny brimmed hats, with peaks either in the center or rakishly at one side.

Our own smart milliners launched peaked hats early in the season, and I saw them in every Paris hat collection, too. It's another Paris-America fashion.

'Slimnastics, 6 Minutes Daily, Will Keep You Lithe and Alive

By Ida Jean Kain

A LITTLE EXERCISE goes a long way toward streamlining. If you knew for sure that a bit of stretching each day would help you recapture a slim, supple waist, and restore that snug, controlled feeling through the midsection, would you take just six precious minutes in the morning to get in trim?

"Slimnastics," as they have been happily termed, can do all that and more. They can help make it a good day. It's not that early-morning exercise is more effective, but it's more sure. And once you get the stretching habit, you won't want to skip—you'll feel so much more alive and lithe.

Ease out of bed and slip into some flannel pajamas, perhaps with elastic around the ankle. They will keep you warm, yet allow freedom of motion. Now for stretching . . .

Assume 'Safety' Position

LIE DOWN on the floor . . . oh, you can take these waker-uppers right in bed if you wish, but the floor offers more resistance. Flex right knee and place right foot flat on the floor. This puts you in the safety position which prevents strain. The exercise is simply to stretch all along the left side, pushing down with the foot and up with the fingertips and pulling s-l-i-m through the middle. Make sure the small of the back is smack against the floor . . . that's an important part of this streamliner. Pull up, pull in, s-t-r-e-t-c-h! Relax. Right off you feel slimmer. Repeat three times, then flex left knee, foot on floor and p-u-l-l along the right side several times. Always concentrate the pull through the midsection.

Now flex both knees and keep both feet on floor. Pull up strongly with the girdle muscles, press back smack against floor and, holding the up-and-in pull, contract hip muscles strongly which raises hips just slightly off floor. Repeat six times, slowly. This tones the long front muscles.

Side-Front Flexing

TO REACH the side-front muscles, assume same position with knees flexed, hips raised just enough for clearance. This time swing hips just slightly sidewards, tipping up as you go toward the side and at the same time pulling in forcibly. Ease back and across to the other side, and contract again with the side-front muscles. Eight to 10 times in all . . . easy does it.

Finally, from a standing position arch arms above head, pull slim through the middle and bend gently to one side, back to center and bend to the other side. Don't try to bend too far at first—as you become more supple, increase it. If you're rusty on exercise, start with six counts only and gradually work up to 12 or more.

Certainly it's worth it! In 10 days you will have a noticeably slimmer waistline, and you'll feel slimmer, too.

Discovery Day Table Touches

Giving a party this week? Maybe the fact that today is Columbus Day will give you a peg on which to hang your d ecorating and refreshment ideas.

You could use tiny ship place cards. (Remember the Nina, the Pinta, and the Santa Maria from back in the third grade? White ships sailing on a sea blue tablecloth would be pretty. The centerpiece could feature a globe of the world. Never mind if it's not exactly like the one Columbus dreamed about in 1492!

Since this week is also National Cranberry Week, you might include this typically American berry on your menu. Delicious dessert tidbit is the cranberry peach dumpling. Cut rolled-cut pastry in 6-inch squares. Put canned peach halves filled with drained whole cranberry sauce in the center of each. Fold over pastry, envelope fashion, press edges together, and bake at 425 degrees Fahrenheit from 25 to 30 minutes.

Serve warm with cranberry hard sauce, made by creaming 1/3 cup of butter, then adding 1 cup confectioner's sugar and 3 tablespoons drained, whole cranberry sauce. Beat until fluffy, pile lightly in dish, and chill before serving.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 17, Whose Mother is Bedridden and Said To Be Dying, Asks Help for Sister and Self in Relation to Drunkard Stepfather Who Is Brutal

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am almost 18 and I have a younger sister, 14, and our mother has an incurable disease and we understand she has only about two months to live.

My father died when I was 10 years old and my mother married again about a year later. The man she married, I'll call him Adam, is a drunkard and he seems to have a special grudge against me. He beats me all the time, and he also would beat my mother before she got down in bed, but he seems to pick on me the most.

The other evening Adam came home drunk and went into my mother's room and closed the door. I told him to leave the door open as I was afraid mother might get out of bed. He came after me and started to choke me. He had me on the floor and I passed out. When I came to my senses he hit me on the head with the heel of his shoe and I passed out again.

Stepfather Mostly Abuses Older Girl

MY MOTHER heard the commotion and got out of bed and I thought she would die then and there; and yet this man says he loves her! I am so discouraged. He dislikes both me and my sister, but he always beats me only. What should I do? I hate to leave my mother in her condition; but still I am afraid I may do something to Adam.

Perhaps I should add that I am very quick tempered and when I am aroused I do things I wouldn't do normally; otherwise I am easy to get along with. Can you please help us? A. G.

Case for Local Welfare Agency

DEAR A. G.: The kind of help this problem calls for can only be supplied by someone in a position to (1) investigate the family situation at firsthand and (2) bring legal authority to bear, if necessary, in protecting you and your sister—and maybe also your mother, if she wishes—from Adam's psychopathic cussedness.

In the newspaper town through which your letter came to me, there is a help-center known as the Family Society, the address of which you can find in the telephone directory—probably under "F"—and I advise you to go there in person, taking this clipping, to get an appointment with a staff counsellor. I am told this service is qualified to diagnose family troubles and provide expert guidance in working out reasonable solutions.

The fact that your mother is said to be dying of an incurable disease, and that you and your sister are legal minors helplessly exposed to vicious example and vicious abuse in the circumstances, ought to spur the Family Society to immediate action on your behalf, to relieve the bitter stress that falls mostly on your mind and body.

Look to Experts for Smooth Lead

INASMUCH as Adam has a sentimental attachment of sorts to your mother that exists independently of his ignorant perverse brutality, it is probable that she in turn has some sentimental concern for him, too. Thus she might feel torn two ways and anxiously plead against your seeking outside help that might enrage or publicly expose him, if she knew in advance that you were considering this precautionary step.

However, Adam's stepfather attitude as described seems too ugly to warrant sentimental tolerance, especially if your mother's days are numbered, because if she dies in the fairly near future, you and your sister obviously would need humane championship at your elbow, to shield you from Adam's chronic hostility and keep your feet on the right road. And in case her life is spared indefinitely, still you seriously need responsible help in easing the conflict.

Therefore, to keep tension at a minimum while getting help, I advise you to consult the Family Agency without talking about it beforehand, and let the agency know that a critical aspect of the problem is how to get started on an improvement program without making bad matters worse in relation to Adam. It's part of the agency's job to engineer a diplomatic lead when expert help has been invited,—and here's hoping the staff has the sense and skill to handle that assignment well. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

An easily made piece of climbing equipment that can be used outdoors and indoors is an elaboration of the saw-horse used by carpenters. Children will delight in climbing up its sides, sitting or standing on the board at the top. In all sorts of ways they will find pleasure and profit in this climbing horse.

Here are some suggested measurements, through variations are quite acceptable. The top board: a two-inch piece, six inches wide and 36 inches long. Attached to this are the four legs, 40 inches long and fixed so that they form a base 24 by 60 inches. Four cross pieces on each of four sides complete the job and make the "ladder" part of the climbing horse. They should be three-quarters by two and five-eighths inches. Nailed evenly on the legs, they will be eight inches apart.

It's a good idea to round off the edges with sandpaper . The horse may be painted, too, but that really isn't necessary.

Maud Allan Tells How Sal, Scorned of Hitler Germany, Brings Aid to Vanquished

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE first hat Mrs. John J. Allan saw was a Salvation Army bonnet, the first music she heard was a Salvation Army band. Daughter of Salvationist parents, Maud Allan, whose husband as Chief of Staff, is first American to be appointed to this second highest position in Salvation Army ranks, is in her own right Director of International Relief to Devastated Nations and Displaced Persons.

For the past three years the Allans have been stationed in England. There, in close connection with her work on the continent, Mrs. Allan has supervised the International Comforts Department installed in the army's huge Clapton center where clothing and supplies received are assembled for distribution. Since the war over four million garments have passed through Clapton.

Perhaps the most interesting part of Mrs. Allan's widespread work is in Germany, where the Salvation Army maintains 77 centers of service, nine wooden halls which were purchased with money from the U. S. in Sweden and set up as food centers and dormitories in Germany, temporary shelters for displaced persons, 112 destroyed buildings in the process of being revamped, a large bunker at Frankfurt where 300 refugees are housed.

Included in the centers of service are kindergartens, summer homes for undernourished children, orphanages, homes for the aged, reception centers for the tens of thousands of prisoners of war still being returned from Soviet prison camps, and, perhaps most important, hostels for homeless youths who have fled from Germany's Russian zone.

Big Force at Work

ALL this is managed by 343 Salvation Army workers, 54 regular employes and innumerable part-time employes culled from the ranks of German unfortunates. In addition groups of volunteer workers have been helping rebuild partially destroyed buildings and temporary shelters such as Nissen huts donated by British and U. S. occupation officials.

Among these is a squad of Britishers, boys and girls, and some 30 young Mennonites hailing from our central States. Money for construction has come from all sorts of sources—German municipalities, the Lord Mayor of London's Fund—as well as individual donations. The German branch of the Salvation Army, the Heilsarmee, is on its feet again after many years of forced inactivity under Hitler and during the war. Recently, some 90 young cadets were trained and graduated as Heilsarmee officers.

Children accepted into Salvation Army care are carefully selected. Only those who show definite signs of undernourishment and permanent malnutrition, needing long and patient nursing, are chosen. Almost all are given sunray treatments.

The Munster Lager, near where returning prisoners of war cross the frontier at Friedland, is known for thousands of miles within Russia. "For years," said one returning prisoner, "we've been dreaming of our first cup of hot cocoa, our first 'God bless you' at Munster."

The point where most of the German escapees from the Soviet zone cross into the British, is at Poppenhagen. Recently young men between 17 and 23 have been arriving at the rate of 60 a day; young girls on a daily average of 10. Living conditions have become so grim that even their parents have urged them to leave home.

Appalling Conditions

MANY of those who remain will be forced to work for the Russians and of those who have managed to get away, many are escapees from appalling conditions in Soviet uranium mines. Even girls have been made to work in these atomic source mines. These kids, if not taken care of, will become vagrants and a great hazard to Germany's rehabilitation. Anyone who visited Russia even as late as the early 30s will remember the pathetic bands of Bezprizorni—homeless boys, victims of the revolution, who roamed the country, and who could, on occasion, be seen curled up like bedraggled puppies in Moscow gutters.

The Salvation Army is housing them in old barracks, Nissen houses and, to keep them occupied, has set them to making furniture. They need materials, however, and clothing, especially shoes, since most of them of necessity left home with only the garments on their backs. The Salvation Army wants, most of all, donations of shoes (they have machinery to repair them) clothing for boys (they get more girls clothing) and unbleached muslin to make sheets. Most of the sheets they have are made of paper—and for morale as well as comfort reasons, they're anxious to have them in all centers.

Mrs. Allan, who's handsome, plump, gray-haired, spooned a small portion of ice cream as she talked and explained, "We don't get this in England." She has four children, seven grandchildren. In appreciation of her work she has been decorated by Queen Juliana of the Netherlands and by King Haakon of Norway.

Her work takes her all over Europe. Recently she traveled along the Norwegian coast visiting Salvation Army centers which stretch to the Arctic Circle. She and her husband actually attended a Lapp Parliament at Alta. In Finland's capital, Helsinki, where her husband addressed 10,000 people, she inspected one of the army's most remarkable centers which includes dormitories for low salary working women—scrub women and such. The newer projects which the Salvation Army is sponsoring are a home for delinquent mothers in England and a property in Normandy where child victims of infantile paralysis are being cared for. The delinquent mothers, accompanied by their children, are taught homemaking and child care—instead of being sent to prison. The French center, at Rammapo, Normandy, is a beautiful estate recently willed to the Salvation Army. After a few weeks in this country, Mrs. Allan will return to London.

About Laundering Corduroy

I have a grey corduroy jumper which is in need of cleaning. Would you advise having it dry cleaned, or could it be laundered? If it can be laundered, is there any special way of doing it? H. B. D.

Corduroy is a fabric which is usually sold as washable, but because washing does fade some corduroys and its weight makes it difficult to dry and home-press to its original shape. I suggest you have the jumper dry cleaned.

Can you help me with the color scheme in my living room, which has cream walls? Drapes are a rough weave in a modern leaf pattern in three shades of green with brown, beige, and a touch of turquoise, and a cream background. The sofa is dark brown with a cream colored trim. I have two green scatter rugs and two table lamps. With the green, cream, and brown what color should I introduce for accent? There are two chairs to cover—a man's lounge and a small lady's chair. I have two unpainted shadow box sets and a large unpainted bookcase. There is a floor lamp shade (stands near large chair, color needed). I can also cover a piano bench in colored corduroy or velvet. All furniture is a dark mahogany, including four dinette chairs, the seats of which I also want to cover. Can you suggest an accent color and explain how I might use it with these items? E. C. F.

You could use coral or sunlight yellow for accent. Paint the inside of the shadow boxes and bookcase either coral or yellow. White paint on the outsides of these pieces would be lovely, particularly if you have white woodwork in the room.

Since the drapes are patterned, I would suggest a two-toned, not too conspicuous green stripe or plain green for the two chairs. The lamp shade could be pale yellow if you choose that for your accent or cream if you choose coral.

The piano bench cover would blend in nicely if it was brown to match the sofa. Using an all-over small, floral pattern with greens and yellow or coral as accent would be practical and attractive for the dinette chair covers.

About a year ago in the Sunday "Parade," an article appeared about children's clothes that were designed to grow with the child, that is, by a few minor alterations the clothes could be enlarged to the next size. At the time, two special patterns for these clothes were offered through The Post. In addition, the ready made clothes were being put on the market.

Could you please tell me if either of these patterns or the ready made clothes are now available in Washington or in this vicinity? B. M.

Several of the downtown department stores sell coats or coat and leggings sets which are adjustable to fit the child as he grows. I did not find a store which sells other types of children's garments with this feature.

As for a pattern, most patterns show methods for adjusting the size, but I did not find a pattern made specifically for clothes "that grow." To find out if such a pattern is available through the Washington Post's pattern service, I suggest you write direct to Ann Adams, 243 West 17th Street, New York, N. Y.

We are planning to paint our three-room apartment in a few weeks but the color has us stumped. The walls are now white, with dinette, kitchen, and bath in cream.

We have limed oak furniture throughout. My sectional sofa has slip covers of coral with plaid cushions (coral, aqua, natural, dark and light green). The drapes are plaid with coral valance. One chair is covered in dark green, a dark green lamp with natural shade, aqua hassock and light green scatter rugs. The bedroom has no color except a lamp with medium blue base. Can you help us with this problem? H. K.

Williamsburg green—a soft, greyed blue green—would be a lovely background for limed oak furniture and your coral and green color scheme. Or, you could use a pale green.

For the bedroom you could use a warm grey, a soft blue such as Wedgwood blue, or a mellow yellow. With grey or blue walls use salmon pink or coral accents. Or, with blue you could have a spread and rug of darker blue. This would be particularly nice if the room is small.

Could you please tell me where I could purchase an intercommunication system consisting of a radio-like box for one room (plugged in) and a radio-like box for another room (plugged in) with no wires connecting the two so I can put one in baby's room and hear her downstairs. E. W. M.

A radio store on F Street sells home intercommunication systems with two stations for about $25. For further information I suggest you call the store at Metropolitan 3500.

Please tell me if there are any companies in Washington that have typing to do at home. B. D.

Yes, there are firms in Washington who occasionally have typing done at home. To get the names of these companies I suggest you watch the "help wanted" columns in The Washington Post classified ads. Or, another way to get in touch with firms who want this work done is to insert an advertisement in The Washington Post.

At what height should pictures be hung? S. C. B.

Generally speaking, pictures should be hung with the center at eye level. In most instances, standing eye level would be the appropriate height, but in the living room a picture directly opposite a favorite lounge chair, for instance, might be hung at seated eye level.

There are other factors aside from height which determine the location of a picture. Large pictures should be hung with a major piece of furniture in such a way as to become part of the grouping. Also, pictures can be hung to help achieve balance in a room. Sometimes they can be hung off center to balance a tall floor lamp or lamp on a table. A picture which has movement in a definite direction should be hung so it "moves" toward the center of the grouping. Avoid having "movement" toward the corner of the room.

Groupings of small pictures are hung so they form a unit with either the lower edge or center of the pictures in a straight line.

I have to pack my silver, among other things, for a long period of storage. The last time I found this was necessary, I found some rolls of tarnishproof tissue paper that was splendid. Do you have in your files the name of any department store or jewelry firm from whom I might buy some here? C. N. M.

White, antitarnish, tissue paper in the sheet is sold in housewares departments of at least two of the large downtown department stores. It comes in a package which sells for 25 cents.

Two Methods Given For Preparing Beets

You can peel two bunches of small-sized beets, cut them in long strips, and cook them in a half cup of salted water for 10 to 15 minutes or until tender. Dress them with a little sugar and lemon juice before serving. Of if you want to cook the beets whole, leave on an inch or two of their stems and the long taproot; peel them after they are cooked and the skins will slip off easily. Then they may be sliced or diced and used as desired.

One on the Aisle—

Birth of Israel Is 'Simplified'

By Richard L. Coe

THE MOST COMPLEX episode of modern history is reduced to a simple, black and white melodrama in "Sword in the Dessert," at the Palace.

Palestine and the birth of Israel is the setting for this story written and produced by Robert Buckner. The sympathy is wholly one-sided. The only views one is given of the Arabs, who have become a tortuous displacement problem, is of three gali-gali men, magicians, whose pass to a camp is needed by the hero. The British are depicted as silly asses who know nothing of colonial administration and the American captain who smuggles in illegal entrants is a money-grubbing fool, who knows nothing of the problem.

Consequently, one must forget the whole intricate maze which led to the creation of the new state as well as the extremely problematical future it now faces. Would that past, present and future of Palestine were half so simple as the emotional basis of Buckner's story.

That story concerns an American ship captain, Dana Andrews, taking illegal entrants to Palestine from Europe. To get his money for the deal, he's forced to go ashore with his passengers. The British learn of the landing and all must be hurried off to the safety of a settlement. To warn his vessel away from the British patrol vessels, Andrews uses the settlement's radio, thus exposing its position as well as that of the refugees.

Marta Toren plays an immensely appealing young woman whose underground broadcasts have inspired the Israeli, and her capture, through Andrews' use of the radio, is seen as a coup for the holders of the mandate, the British. Here the film becomes a series of escapes and counter-escapes by all concerned and the picture concludes with a shot of Bethlehem on Christmas Eve, a symbol, evidently, that the tragedy of Palestine will be resolved in some wonderful and mysterious way.

Filmed at Monterey, Calif., the settings are remarkably convincing replicas of the eastern Mediterranean; some suggestion of the remarkable farm communals is ably given and one's sympathy is at all times directed at the tragedy of the refugees. But for a picture which its producer stated would fairly present both sides of a thorny question, "Sword in the Desert" is about as unbiased as President Truman defending the Eighty-first Congress.

"SWORD IN THE DESERT." Universal-International release produced and written by Robert Buckner. Photographed by Irving Glassberg. Directed by George Sherman. At the Palace.

Moore Child Seeks Mother As Custodian

Seven-year-old James Moore testified yesterday in District Court that he prefers his mother as his custodian because he "loves her."

He qualified as a witness after he told the court that he believes in God and knows that God will punish those who tell untruths.

The hearing before Judge F. Dickinson Letts is over who is entitled to custody of James and his 11-year-old brother John A. Moore, jr. The father, a Mount Airy, Md., farmer, and the mother, Mrs. Rosa B. Moore, 40, of 766 Princeton pl. nw., have been divorced for several years.

The case has taken four days and will be continued today.

Moore, who now has legal custody, was on the witness stand for most of the day. He was cross examined extensively on his financial ability to support the two boys as well as his present wife and the four children she has borne him.

All-Night Parking Ban Rescheduled For Arterials

Bans on all-night parking on principal arterial streets of Washington will be reimposed on December 15 and continued to March 15 to aid street cleaning forces in clearing the roadways during snowstorms.

The Commissioners yesterday directed the practice, which was started 15 years ago, be continued in spite of complaints from some residents that they were forced to park several blocks away from home during the period and from others that they received parking tickets on clear nights.

The city heads acted on the recommendation of Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, who pointed out that unless the parking was prohibited between 2 and 7 a. m. during the winter season, snowplows would bury parked cars and traffic lane widths would be reduced. Keneipp said Washington was one of the few large communities where all-night parking is permitted, anyway.

Functions of GSA Are Outlined by Rep. Holifield

Congress created the General Services Administration to get an "efficient job" done in public administration and to give the taxpayer a break," Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif) said last night.

Representative Holifield explained the congressional motives behind GSA before a round-table of the Society for the Advancement of Management in the State Department International Conference room at 1778 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

He said Congress expects "cooperative action" from all Federal agencies in their dealings with the General Services Administrator and wants agencies "to buy only what is needed—not merely desired." Congress also wants agencies, he said, "to protect well what is bought; don't hoard but identify and quickly declare your excesses."

Newsman to Talk On Marshall Plan Before AVC Today

Some aspects of the Marshall Plan will be discussed by Alfred Friendly, The Washington Post reporter, at the American Veterans Committee Clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., today at 12:15 p. m.

Friendly recently rejoined the staff of The Washington Post after a leave of absence during which he served as European information director for the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Washington AVC Chapters 1 and 2 will select delegates to the AVC national convention in the evening. The convention will be held in Chicago November 24-27.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE companions of song, Les Compagnons de la Chanson, opened at the Shoreham last night for this week only. The nine French boys do satires of long hair music and choral groups which are refreshingly different—and always good for a few laughs. They have a dinner show in the Blue Room at 9:15 and sing for supper in the Palladium Room at 11:30.

Also in the Blue Room is the jolly, rollicking Irish conjurer, Dell O'Dell. Her special delight is reducing the stuffier guests to a state of absurdity—with the help of her magic, of course.

HOTEL ANNAPOLIS' steel gray Anchor Room, with its big square posts and shipshape portholes, now has Denny Miles at the piano. Youthful and very blond (he's 100 percent Norwegian descent), he's nevertheless a seasoned performer; he's been at it since the age of 9, when his mother accompanied him on his weekly radio show.

DENNY MILES

Denny sings, chatters, and throws in a few piano solos. And also institutes a community sing every night about 11, which warms up the room considerably. All kinds of singing are on his list, but he's best with the Danny Kaye type novelty number. He's no Danny Kaye, mind you, but even so it's pleasant listening.

RITA ANN ARTISTE may love the Neptune Room, where she's staying month after month, but it appears her entertainment circuit has become stationary chiefly because of a Washingtonian. Whoever it is, he obviously has "I Only Have Eyes for You" played for him constantly during her programs.

She says we'll know all about it at Christmas. But meanwhile she's hard at work on her music. Johnny Salb, WTOP staff organist, is teaching her organ and piano arranging. After four years at Juilliard, she's still an eager beaver about music lessons.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—A few days before his accident, Justice William O. Douglas attended the State Fair in Yakima, Wash. A photographer who wanted to take pictures of him took Douglas there, and insisted that the justice mustn't buy a ticket but should enter on the cameraman's pass to the fair. The lady ticket-taker stopped Douglas. The cameraman told her: "He's my assistant." The ticket-taker seemed reluctant about it, then warned: "Maybe I should demand proof. But I'll remember you by your green tie" . . . "As long as you want to remember me and are technical about proof," began Douglas, and then purchased a ticket, posed for a picture showing him delivering the ticket to the lady, and mailed the photo to her. Then, so that his status as photographer's assistant should not be false, Douglas took pictures at the fair.

A dour film executive, who never has been known to smile, sat with Keenan Wynn, who decided that the man's determinedly solemn front must be pierced. Wynn entertained him for an hour, with every comic routine and antic he ever had learned . . . "And what happened?" the comic was asked . . . "He finally laughed," Wynn reported. "And when he laughed—dust came out of his mouth."

Ben Hecht was discussing a new novelist who writes about people and events of today. "He's not a good reporter," Hecht said of him, "because he thinks that an ability to construct good sentences and proper phrases is enough. The first rule for a reporter is to go out into the world and notice things."

What's the Verdict?

DRIVER "CONFESSION"

Q. Tucker was a truck driver whose truck hit Childs, a jaywalker, knocking him unconscious. Tucker's company was sued by Childs, who offers evidence that when a policeman arrived at the scene Tucker said: "I reckon it was my fault. I just didn't see the guy." The company objects to the introduction of this statement as nothing but an opinion, and as hearsay. What would the court rule?

A. Tucker, as the servant of the company, was speaking and acting for the company in making his report to the policeman. The conduct and assertions of a party to a suit are competent evidence when offered by his adversary. Since Tucker was acting for the company, his conduct may be put in evidence against the company, as an exception to the rule barring hearsay. But the statement: "I reckon it was my fault" would not settle the question of fault. The question of fault in such an accident is a legal one, which the truck driver would not necessarily be qualified to decide. Other facts, such as whether Childs was contributorily negligent in jaywalking into the path of the truck, would be brought before the jury. But the answer to the specific question is: Tucker's statement to the police is admissible as evidence . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Oh, Well; Solitaire Is A Nice Game, Too

West Coast poker players caught in a police raid carried their appeal to the Supreme Court. They contended that poker playing is "a fundamental right of free men."

But the court ducked the issue, and refused to listen to arguments.

Many a married man who has been trying to adjudicate that issue in his own home will understand and sympathize with the court's caution.

"Two tan male kittens." (Chestnut 2788.)

OLD-BUT-STILL-GOOD DEPT.

Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se. reminds me of the classic gag about the woman who says "I was down in the dumps today so I got a new hat," and her catty neighbor who purrs: "Ah, I wondered where you got them."

PARKING RIGHTS

Several property owners have complained bitterly that they can't park near their own homes because "foreigners" from Virginia and Maryland and from outlying parts of the District leave their cars on residential streets all day long.

I presume that these "foreign" cars belong to motorists who drive part-way downtown, find an all-day parking space, and then conclude their journey via public transportation.

Whatever the explanation, they undoubtedly do tend to congest residential areas, and probably cause some inconvenience to householders. But Traffic Director George Keneipp says that nothing can be done about it.

A property owner has no special parking rights in front of his property. He must take pot luck, like everybody else.

Keneipp points out that if a majority of residents requests a 2-hour limit, the District will post the area and get rid of the all-day parkers. But the same restrictions would apply to residents, who would then have to go out and move their cars every two hours. So that's not much help.

What it boils down to, of course, is that the District just does not have enough accommodations for all those who would like to park all day in the downtown area. And it's high time we realized it.

Downtown merchants offer to pay for the first hour's parking in a nearby garage, and some of them even open branch stores in the suburbs. They're alive to the price of insufficient parking space, but so far their realization hasn't been translated into an adequate program of action.

RADIO NOTES

James E. Pappas of 700 Caroline st., Fredericksburg, Va., is struck by the number of radio call letters that form words. He cites as examples:

WIND, Chicago, Ill.; WEST, Easton, Pa.; WOOD, Grand Rapids, Mich.; WAVE, Louisville, Ky.; WIRE, Indianapolis, Ind.; WING, Dayton, Ohio, and KEYS, Corpus Christi, Tex.

There are dozens more, of course, including my own favorites, KOIN and KALE.

In most instances a station's call letters are meaningless. However, in some cases the license holder tries to get a special combination (or tries to invent a slogan to fit the letters assigned to him).

WTOP is especially appropriate because the station's signal is received near the TOP of the dial. WRC is translated into "Washington's Radio Center," and WWDC is a natural as an abbreviation for "Washington, D. C." My old alma mater, WCPO-ls owned by the Cincinnati Post.

And so it goes. It's nice to have a good set of call letters, but not absolutely essential. What's far more important is to have a good set of sponsors.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Everybody seems to be in favor of outlawing the atomic bomb except the other guy.

AUTOS & MILES

I was complaining about modern automobiles to Walter Haight the Man the other day. (I haven't seen Walter Haight the Horse since Charles Town closed.)

"The trouble with the new models," I said, "is that they all look alike."

"Not to an expert, they don't," disagreed Walter. "I see I'll have to introduce you to a friend of mine, Miles White, who lives at 4700 N. Chelsea lane, in Bethesda."

"What's so wonderful about Miles?" I asked.

"Well, sir," said Walter, "there's a fellow who can identify any car on the road, in just a glance. It makes no difference how new they are, or how old they are, or how beat up they are—this boy will give you the pedigree.

"Why, the other day, we were out walking and saw an old jalopy up ahead and I said, 'Miles, what kind of car is that?' and quick as a flash he said, 'That's a Willys-Knight.' So we walked up and checked on it—and sure enough, it was. And the Willys-Knight hasn't even been made since 1933."

"That's pretty good," I agreed.

"Yes, it is," continued Walter. "And the funny part of it is that Miles can't be accused of spotting the nameplates, because he can't even read or write."

"Illiterate, eh?"

"Well," conceded Walter, "you could call it that. But after all, Miles is only 2½ years old—what do you think he is, a genius or something?"

Navy Promotes Discord—Kilday

By Drew Pearson

The public now knows what happened when Admiral Arthur Radford testified at an open session of the House Armed Services Committee. But they don't know what happened at the closed-door session which preceded his testimony.

Kilday

After Admiral Radford read his confidential statement—later repeated in the open session—of gripes against the Air Force and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, Congressman Paul Kilday of Texas remarked to him:

"Admiral, I am disappointed that you did not come here with an affirmative statement of what the Navy can do, instead of a criticism of what the Air Force can do."

"I'm just the leadoff man," replied Radford. "Later on we'll have some witnesses on the affirmative side."

"That's my point," shot back Kilday. "The Navy has chosen to lead off by criticizing the other fellow, instead of telling us what the Navy can do and how much you need in surface ships, submarines and air power.

"It's obvious to me that you want to promote all this discord, which must be of no little comfort to a potential enemy. I'm for ending it right here and now, without letting this committee be used to carry on such bickering at an open hearing."

Secretary of the Navy Matthews didn't open his mouth until after the committee overrode Kilday's protests and voted 9 to 6 to give the admirals an open hearing. Then he remarked to Chairman Carl Vinson of Georgia, who sided with the admirals: "The responsibility is now yours."

"Mr. Secretary," interposed Kilday, "You might as well cancel out your court-martial of Captain Crommelin. He is not promoting discord any longer. This committee has taken over for him after the vote today."

Free Air Ride

The Democrats were tipped off that this columnist was checking on what Air Force planes might fly to Kansas City for Bill Boyle's big home-coming jamboree. Possibly this had something to do with the fact that not a single Air Force plane made the trip.

However, a few high officials still got a free ride—in a plush, private plane owned by Phillips Petroleum Co. This plane was put at the disposal of the Democratic National Committee by Phillips' chief lobbyist, R. C. Joplin, and its free passengers included Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, U. S. Treasurer Georgia Neese Clark and Assistant Secretary of Commerce Tom Davis. The plane also stopped in St. Louis to pick up Vice President Barkley, who had been courtin'.

After the party, Phillips Petroleum flew Barkley and Tobin back to Washington, then the plane returned to its home base in Oklahoma.

Note—The oil companies have been lobbying for control of tidelands oil and against Leland Olds' confirmation to the Federal Power Commission. But if Mr. Joplin was in a mood to lobby, he didn't get a chance with Vice President Barkley. For the Vice President slept both ways.

Senator Miller's Vote

The sudden death of Senator Bert Miller of Idaho may hold up displaced-persons legislation until next year.

The bill removing religious discrimination from the Displaced Persons Act was supposed to come up for Senate debate this week, but now the Judiciary Committee will be expected to attend Senator Miller's funeral in Boise.

Since this is the committee handling the displaced persons bill, it may prevent the bill from reaching the floor at all.

However, there is one thing the Senate ought to know. The evening before Senator Miller died, as one of his last wishes, he told Senator Magnuson of Washington that he wanted to vote for the displaced persons bill. Undoubtedly Senator Miller would have preferred to have his colleagues stay in Washington and vote to aid thousands of refugees who are still alive than mourn over him in Idaho.

Japanese Competition

While the State Department plans to lower tariffs, a New England manufacturer is getting ready to put the blast on Gen. Douglas MacArthur for encouraging Japanese production of cheap, competitive goods for the American market.

He is Alfred F. Reilly of Providence, R. I., president of Evans Case Co., biggest United States producer of cigarette lighters. Reilly will demand a congressional investigation of MacArthur on the ground that he is using United States taxpayers' money to build up Jap industries at the expense of American business and labor.

Woman's Hidden Life Savings Destroyed by Blaze in Home

The $25-a-week Government charwoman looked dazedly at a single melted-down nickel, all that remained of $3700 in life savings after a fire swept her home at [redacted].

Mrs. [redacted], 43, looking old from years of toil, fainted when they told her the news while the last wisps of smoke were rising from the burned remains of her home.

She had hidden the money, saved for the day when she no longer could work, under four layers of tacked-down linoleum in her kitchen for safekeeping. The savings were in $1, $10, $20 and $100 bills.

"All my life I've scrounged," she sobbed last night after being treated for shock at Emergency Hospital. "All my life I've done without to save that money."

Neighbors had to hold her to keep her from rushing in as the flames filled the kitchen of the Southwest frame row house shortly after she and a nephew had started preparing lunch.

The blaze, firemen said, apparently started from a leaking oil stove in the kitchen. [redacted], who lives upstairs, had planned to have the stove repaired Tuesday.
